DEBT REVISION DEALT BLOW BY CONGRESS FOES

Oppose Revival of Funding Board.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Leading members of the senate and house today built still higher the barrier of congressional opposition to any revision of the European war debts.

PAT HARRISON. [Fotograms.]

Members of the committee group who will meet with the President on the morning following Mr. Hoover's conference with Gov. Roosevelt announced themselves as opposed not only to any extension of the moratorium but to the revival of the world war debt funding commission.

The fact that the three who came out with vigorous statements of their objections were Democrats was considered significant of their party attitude. While they explained that their views were in no sense a reflection of the opinions of Gov. Roosevelt their opinions were weighed with the thought that they might represent a pointer showing how the President elect may be expected to react next Tuesday when he talks with the President at the White House.

Harrison Voices Opposition.

As ranking Democratic member of the senate finance committee and its chairman when the Democrats control in the next congress, Senator Pat Harrison [Miss.] will be one of the twelve who will confer with the President next Wednesday morning. The President last night sent invitations to the three ranking Republican and Democratic members of the senate finance committee and house ways and means committee.

Senator Harrison today asserted that the present world situation is far different from what it was in June, 1931, when the collapse of European central banks demanded a quick relief that was supplied through the moratorium.

He pointed out, too, that though Britain and France might now appeal to be excused from their Dec. 15 debt payments they had money enough in 1931 to spend respectively 460 million dollars and 575 million dollars for military purposes.

Congress on Record Against It.

"I am opposed to any revival of the world war debt commission," Senator Harrison said, "because to do so carries, in the circumstances, a suggestion that we now are willing to cancel the debt in whole or in part. It is peculiarly strange that these nations that make the request for another year's extension have coupled with that request the other request for revision of the debt agreements.

"The congress in unmistakable terms in its resolution of December, last year, expressed its sentiment, and that was against the action being interpreted in the slightest way as any intimation on the part of this country to modify or cancel the agreements. In the last campaign the candidates of both political parties expressed themselves directly and definitely against cancellation, and the Democratic party included such a plank in its platform.

Collier and Rainey Fight Move.

"Certainly we cannot, so soon after the election, repudiate that pledge to the American people. If our debtors have any definite proposals to make, they might do so, and then the congress can give whatever consideration to the subject it deserves."

Representative James W. Collier [Dem., Miss.], chairman of the ways and means committee, and Representative Henry T. Rainey [Dem., Ill.], next ranking Democratic member and candidate for the speakership in the next congress, were briefer but equally emphatic.

It was also recalled that Senator David A. Reed [Rep., Pa.], who will be among those at the conference, opposed it at the last congress during the moratorium debate.

Senator Kenneth McKellar [Dem., Tenn.] was another senator to come out strongly against cancellation or revival of the debt commission.

Still another member of congress to express opposition was Representative Edward W. Pou [Dem., N. C.], chairman of the house rules committee.

Senator Jones of '5-10' Fame Dies in Seattle

Seattle, Nov. 19.—[Saturday.]—(AP)—United States Senator Wesley L. Jones, chairman of the senate appropriations committee, and noted as author of the "5 and 10" prohibition law, died here early today. The senator, who was defeated for reelection Nov. 8 by Homer T. Bone, Tacoma Democrat, was 69 years old.

3 COMMUNISTS SEE ROOSEVELT; FORGET SPEECH

Ask Protection for 'Hunger March.'

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Three communists, holding themselves spokesmen for the idle, all organizers of an impending "hunger march" upon Washington, appeared at the executive mansion today and loudly demanded to see Franklin D. Roosevelt. They wanted to see him because he is governor of New York and also because he is President elect of the United States.

The three men brought with them copies of a speech bristling with Red-isms, and with many "demands" and they passed the copies to newspaper men, saying they intended, if they ever got to see Mr. Roosevelt, to deliver the speech.

When, instead of being hustled out the door, they were invited into the governor's study they were obviously surprised and ill at ease. They shuffled into the room and stood before the governor at his desk.

Shuffle Out Meekly.

A half hour later they shuffled out, quite meekly, having spoken their demands, and having received answers to them, some of the answers being quite disconcerting and alas, they had forgotten completely to read the blatant speach they brought along.

The trio of agitators, and the manner in which they identified themselves, were as follows:

Milton Stone of Schenectady, bravest of the lot so far as talkativeness went, organizer of the New York contingent of the proposed hunger march on Washington, scheduled to have their say before the short session of congress next month. Stone is a corpulent man about 32; his clothes were pressed and he sported a new camel's hair overcoat. Well fed, he little looked the part of a hunger marcher.

Richard Sullivan of New York City, appearing for the "winter relief committee." He wore no necktie, but was warmly clad. He needed a hair cut and shave badly.

Sam Weissman of New York City, for the "council." He was fairly dressed, was thin and slightly bald—the most likely qualifier for a hunger marcher.

Want "Violence" Prevented.

"We want for you," started Stone as he faced Gov. Roosevelt, "to tell President Hoover to prevent violence when we go to Washington next month."

"I am a private citizen at this time," the governor said. "I have no authority at Washington."

"Well, you are governor of this state and we ask you if you'll be responsible for terrorism against the hunger marchers as they pass through this state. You can give us safe conduct."

"Any person has a right to travel," replied Mr. Roosevelt, "and the governor hopes and trusts that police everywhere will give humane treatment."

Then Stone, having failed to get any satisfaction concerning Washington and New York state, came down to Albany and demanded that the governor see to it that the hunger marchers are not molested when they organize in Clinton square on Nov. 23.

Up to Mayor of Albany.

"You'll have to talk to the mayor of Albany about that," the governor said to this. "He is the local police authority."

Then Stone revealed his communistic association when he spoke bitterly of police attacks during a demonstrations at the Capitol building in 1931 on a large group carrying communistic banners and placards.

"We were attacked when we attempted to present a petition at that time," Stone complained. The governor, with more asperity than he had shown thus far, retorted:

"You committed a serious offense against the state at that time. You attempted to break up the session of the legislature. Nothing happened until you did that."

Tries Another Tack.

Stone tried another tack, on more general ground.

"What about the eviction of home owners?" he demanded.

"Read my speeches and you'll see how I stand on that."

"But they are being evicted now in this state."

"Give me the names and I'll take it up with the relief committee."

Stone wanted a special legislative session to provide relief funds.

MUNICH FEARS U. S. RAID ON BREWMASTERS

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

MUNICH, Nov. 18.—Whether there will be an open market for German beer in the United States soon concerns the Bavarian brewery owners less than the danger of an exodus of experienced brewmasters to that country.

With the export outlook still a mass of froth, the heads of some large local beer plants envisage a raid on their staffs of trained brewmasters. It is realized that twelve years' stoppage of production has left the United States short of trained hop and barley manipulators.

In addition to such a menace, one brewery head said, there are also inquiries from New York for waitresses of the Hofbrau dynasty capable of negotiating twelve steins in each hand on each trip. It is predicted here that speedy service will be demanded, once the faucets are again legally opened.

WOMAN ASLEEP 9 MONTHS; MAY BE NEW RECORD

Miss Patricia Maguire, 27 years old, has now been asleep at her home, 523 Clarence avenue, Oak Park, for more than nine months, said to be a record for a case of sleeping sickness.

She became drowsy on Jan. 19 and a month later was completely unconscious. Since then her slumbers have been practically continuous. In the last few weeks it is said that she has shown slight improvement, being able to move her arms and legs and at intervals to understand what is said to her. During her illness she has been fed a liquid diet.

Miss Maguire is under the care of Dr. Eugene F. Traut. He is hopeful that she will recover, but refuses to make any prediction as to when she will awaken fully. A chiropractor and a psycho-analyst have attempted to rouse the girl, but have been unsuccessful.

ATLANTA ARMS VIGILANTES TO STOP BOMBINGS

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Police, county commissioners and citizens joined forces in Atlanta today for warfare on bandits and bombers in the wake of a prolonged series of murders, robberies, and explosions that wrecked transmission lines of the Georgia Power company.

The police committee of the municipal council plans to deputize 1,500 business men to operate somewhat like vigilantes of frontier days. Meanwhile scores of policemen who have volunteered to work overtime are patrolling the streets.

The power company attributes the vandalism to a labor dispute that existed months ago.

Helen Hayes, March Voted Movies' Best

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Helen Hayes was chosen as the outstanding motion picture actress of the past year, and Frederic March as the outstanding actor, in bestowal of gold statuette awards at tonight's annual banquet of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Science.

Mr. March's work in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" won him the highest recognition.

The gold prizes were awarded to Miss Hayes and March as a result of a vote taken by all ranks within the film industry, each writer, actress, actor, director, producer, supervisor, executive, and camera man in the ranks of the motion picture academy casting one vote.

Other Awards Made.

Besides the prizes for actress and actor, other awards were announced, signifying the industry's own stamp of approval on the year's performances, as follows:

DIRECTOR—Frank Borzage for "Bad Girl."

WRITER—For best adaptation, of novel or play, for film purposes, Edwin Burke for "Bad Girl."

PHOTOGRAPHY—Leo Garmes for "Shanghai Express."

ART DIRECTION—Gordon Wiles for "Trans-Atlantic."

Lionel Barrymore 1931 Winner.

Lionel Barrymore, who last year won the prize as outstanding actor, for his work in "A Free Soul," was toastmaster.

Secret ballots were sent to the 850 members of the academy. There is no power, it is agreed, in any branch of motion pictures that could, or can exert any atom of influence on the marking of those secret ballots that presented these prizes tonight to Miss Hayes and Mr. March.

1929—Mary Pickford and Warner Baxter.

1930—Norma Shearer and George Arliss.

LEADERS OF LABOR FIGHT PROPOSAL OF TAXES UPON SALES

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—The American Federation of Labor, in a statement by William Green, its president, declared its intention "to oppose the enactment of sales tax legislation during the short session of congress."

It added that a "strong declaration" against such a tax would be adopted at the federation's convention in Cincinnati next week.

"Labor views with feelings of deep apprehension the attempt of the advocates of sales tax legislation to transfer the burden of taxation from the wealth of the nation to the masses of the people," the statement said.

"Having consistently held that sales tax legislation is un-American and inconsistent with our democratic form of government, the American Federation of Labor will make sales tax legislation an issue to be determined by a record vote by the members of congress."

RUDOLPH BLOME MISSING; WIFE NOTIFIES POLICE

Rudolph S. Blome, general contractor, was reported missing to the Hudson avenue police last night by his wife, Mrs. Viola Blome, who fears her husband is a victim of amnesia. She said he had received no kidnaping threats and apparently was in good health.

Mr. Blome left his apartment in the Ambassador hotel at 8:30 in the morning. He did not go to his office in the First National Bank building and was not seen at the company's warehouse at 2711 South Wells street.

After waiting for twelve hours without word from her husband, Mrs. Blome reported to the police. Mr. Blome is 41 years old and was described as 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing about 170 pounds. He has grayish eyes and graying hair.

'MAX' SAVES HIS MISTRESS FOR THE LAST TIME

Mrs. Benjamin Schultz, who, with her husband, operates a bakery at 5336 Fullerton avenue, did not worry about robbers while Max, her German police dog, was in the store. The dog already had proved his worth by once routing a bandit who attempted to rob the bakery.

Last night three men entered. All carried revolvers and ordered Mrs. Schultz, Miss Helen Gasinski, a clerk, and a woman customer into a rear room. None of them noticed the dog and Mrs. Schultz spoke to the animal. Max leaped at the bandit leader, but too late. Two bullets killed the dog, but the robbers in their excitement fled without loot.

Woman Slain in Riverside; Youth Missing

A youth suspected of being James Varecha, who is believed to be the moron killer of Frank Jordan last Wednesday, was held last night by the police of Wenona, Ill. Chicago police have gone to Wenona to look at him. Evidences multiplied that Varecha killed Jordan and assaulted Lillian Henry. Story on page 3.

The body of Mrs. Ellen Saxe, 60 years old, who had been beaten to death, was found late last night in a cistern in the rear of her home at 264 Shenstone road, Riverview.

Early today the police of Riverside and Chicago were conducting a search for Bert Arnold, 16 years old, a member of her household, and the son by a former marriage of C. B. Arnold, manufacturer, whose present wife is a daughter of Mrs. Saxe.

The elder Arnold and Mrs. Arnold discovered the tragedy when they returned home from a theater trip downtown. Young Arnold was missing then and so was the small car belonging to Mrs. Saxe, which had been in the garage behind the house. Mrs. Saxe was a widow of property and had returned home recently after a tour in the east.

A theory was advanced by the boy's father that Bert was kidnaped by the killer or killers of the elderly woman.

Trail Leads to Cistern.

"When we got back home," said Arnold, "we discovered a pool of blood in the living room. There was a trail that led through the kitchen and the back yard to the old wood covered cistern.

"I got a flashlight, looked down, and saw Mrs. Saxe's body. I called help and then we started to look for Bert. We wish to give the authorities all the help we can and we want them to look through the neighborhood thoroughly. Perhaps he will be found."

As outlined by the parents of the youth, the evening was to have been a quiet one at home. While they went downtown the grandmother was to care for the two young children of the couple, who were asleep upstairs. Bert asked and was given permission to attend a dancing class at the Episcopal church of Riverside.

Youth at Dancing Class.

The youngsters slept soundly through the events that brought the death of the grandmother. Bert, the police found, left the dancing class promptly at 11:15 p. m. as he had been instructed by his father.

As his parents reached the house at 11:40, the police were certain that the killing, if Bert had a part in it as either a participant or a witness, occurred between 11:25 p. m. and 11:40 p. m.

"My boy and my mother-in-law," said the father, "were always on the best of terms. He had never been wild and we can account for this tragedy only by believing that he was overpowered by those who killed her. I know of no motive for any one killing her unless it might be robbery."

There was no evidence of anything in the house having been stolen, it was said.

The Riverside police asked that a search be made everywhere for the automobile, which bore the license number 407,532 and which was owned by Mrs. Saxe.

BARBER TRACES DRY LEADER; AN AMNESIA VICTIM

Hiding as Miner in North Carolina.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—A mysterious stranger in overalls, who for more than two months has been questing through the deep valleys of the Great Smoky mountains in a search for gold, was identified tonight in the little village of Whittier, forty miles to the southwest of Asheville.

The stranger is Raymond Robins, 59 years old, wealthy dry leader, economist, and a personal friend of President Hoover. He has been the object of a nation-wide search since Sept. 6, when he failed to keep an appointment to lunch with the President in Washington. Mr. Robins for many years was a resident of Chicago and in 1914 was Bull Moose candidate for the United States senate from Illinois.

Identified By Nephew

The identification was made by John Dreier, a nephew of Mrs. Robins, who issued a statement to the effect that Mr. Robins is "suffering from amnesia." Otherwise, it was added, he is in sound physical condition and "in possession of his ordinary mental faculties."

Under the name of Raymond Rogers, Mr. Robins had been living in a country boarding house in Whittier for the last two months, while federal agents and police officials in twenty states have been investigating theories that bootlegger enemies or Russian emigre imperialists murdered him in revenge for his activities against them.

Barber Is Alert.

The alertness of Frank Fredmond, town barber of Whittier and a son-in-law of the Swain county sheriff, led to the identification. The last time he cut Mr. Robins' hair he was struck with the resemblance of the lone prospector of the Smokies to pictures of the missing man. He told his wife of his suspicion and by her advice repeated his story to two prohibition agents.

They communicated with J. Ed Kanipe, deputy prohibition administrator in Asheville, and Washington was asked to send an authenticated photograph. Kanipe and Dreier together sought him out in the boarding house and the long search was ended.

Dreier would not disclose what had been done with his uncle, saying it would be better for his health if he were kept in seclusion. It was learned tonight that he was left in the boarding house and provided with a guard and with medical attention.

Presumably he will remain there until the arrival of his wife from her Florida home.

Going back to the pick and shovel and washpan of a prospector for precious metals was, with Mr. Robins, something in the nature of a reversion to type. In his youth he was one of the thousands who swept into the gold fields of the Klondike. There he made a "strike" and brought out gold.

Makes Speeches for Hoover

His recital to the villagers of his intention to seek gold in the mountain streams of the Smokies caused no excitement. Traces of old have been found in those waters and prospectors are not unknown in the region, one of the wildest in the eastern part of the country.

The natives were, however, astonished when he mounted a soap box one day in the main street of Whittier and made an impassioned speech in favor of the reëlection of President Hoover. His garb—he never changed from the overalls in which he first appeared—and his diction and oratorical abilities contrasted oddly.

Attends G. O. P. Convention.

Thereafter his speeches were regular occurrences. He delivered at least four long speeches in favor of the President. One report had it that he made twenty short talks in one day. He attended the Swain county Republican convention and remarked that he was once a friend of President Theodore Roosevelt.

Other than to make the political speeches the stranger kept to himself. He became known as "that Hoover prospector" among the mountaineers. He appeared to have sufficient funds for his simple needs.

"He's a well read fellow, but queer," was the verdict of those who came to know him.

Tramps for 20 Miles Daily.

When Mr. Robins first arrived in Whittier, which has some 400 inhabitants, he told the people at the boarding house that he had had a long layoff from active outdoor work and that he found it fatiguing to walk more than a couple of miles a day. His endurance grew and toward the end of his stay in the hills, it was reported, he thought nothing of a 20 mile tramp daily.

Only a few days ago, however, he sprained one of his knees in a fall down a steep hillside. He failed to return to the boarding house that night but hobbled in the following day.

"I stayed all night with an Indian in his cabin," he said.

Dons Tattered Overalls.

The overalls Mr. Robins wore, it was said, were the same old tattered pair he was wont to don when he made excursions into the underworld to seek evidence against bootleggers. Because these garments were missing when his absence from his usual haunts was discovered color was lent to the theory that he had gone on one of his expeditions and had been seized and killed by bootleggers.

Credence was lent this theory last Tuesday in Boston, where an alleged swindler claimed to have information that he was tossed into the sea by rum runners off Montauk Point, L. I.

Two circumstances contributed to keep Mr. Robins' asylum a secret for so many weeks. One was the wildness of the country. Whittier is on a branch railroad line, and is seldom visited by tourists. There are only two telephones in the village.

Visitor Grows a Long Beard.

The second factor was the long beard he had grown, which made his resemblance to printed photographs obscure. When his wife's nephew confronted him today he failed to recognize him and insisted that he was not Robins, but Raymond Rogers.

Apparently he had intended to make a long stay in the village. Up the mountainside behind the boarding house he had cut a long trail of his own. In the tree at the summit he had constructed a lookout tower, where for hours—some days—he was accustomed to sit and gaze out over the blue hills fading into purple haze at the far horizon.

From sources in Asheville it was learned tonight that Mrs. Robins, accompanied by her secretary, Miss Lisa von Borowsky, arrived at the Grove Park inn here on Oct. 17 and remained two days. Shortly afterward, it was said, she abandoned the earlier theory that he had been kidnaped and murdered and accepted a belief that he was alive and would be found.

Mrs. Robins Speeds to Asheville.

Brooksville, Fla., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Bearing up well under the strain of weeks of waiting and hoping that her husband would be found alive, Mrs. Raymond Robins left here tonight for Asheville, N. C., immediately after receiving word that the missing prohibition leader had been found in a mountain village near there.

Accompanied only by her secretary, Miss Lisa von Borowsky, she departed by automobile, planning, it was said, to take a train or plane at Jacksonville and reach Asheville late tomorrow. Miss von Borowsky told F. B. Coogler Sr., manager here for Mr. Robins, that Mrs. Robins was "bearing up well."

Brother Seriously Ill.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Officials at a santarium here where Dr. Vernon Robins, brother of Raymond Robins, is a patient, said tonight he was too ill to be notified of the finding of the prohibition leader.

Dr. Robins is a city chemist of Louisville, Mrs. Z. T. McKay, a cousin, said Dr. Robins was not told until two weeks later of his brother's disappearance.

Mrs. Robins, wife of the prohibition leader, came here shortly after a visit to President and Mrs. Hoover last month. During the visit she expressed belief her husband was alive.

U. S. Secret Service Active.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Raymond Robins' disappearance caused a nation-wide search, which was centered for several weeks in Chicago after friends living in that city reported that they had seen him upon the streets. The United States secret service was directed by President Hoover to take part in the search.

Robins had called Walter H. Newton, one of the presidential secretaries, on Sept. 2 and arranged a conference with President Hoover on Sept. 6. He had been stopping at the time at the City club in New York. His wife, Mrs. Margaret Dreier Robins, who was the heiress to a Brooklyn fortune, was visiting friends in Maine.

Robins left the City club on Sept. 3, leaving his baggage behind him. No trace of him was found in the east, but on Sept. 9, the day after his disappearance had been made known at the White House, a number of acquaintances reported they had seen him in the Chicago loop on the previous day. Among these were Mrs. W. Raqua Bryant of Evanston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, old friends of the Robins', and W. W. Haupt, a friend of 20 years standing.

Wife Blames Bootleggers.

Mrs. Robins, informed of her husband's disappearance, immediately asserted that in her opinion he had been the victim of Florida bootleggers, who, she said, had threatened Robins because of his prohibition activities in that state. Her statements were discounted by federal officials.

Mrs. Robins said that she was certain that her husband was not suffering from amnesia, as was suggested at the time. It also was suggested that he may have been kidnaped by Russian imperialists. Robins became a friend of Lenin and Trotzky while he was doing Red Cross work in Russia at the end of the world war, and upon his return to the United States provoked controversies by his defense of the soviet government. Mrs. Robins also disputed this theory.

For several days, after pictures of Robins had appeared in newspapers, other Chicagoans continued to report that they had seen the missing man in that city. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, head of the allied dry forces, flew to Chicago from Portland, Ore., to assist in the search for his friend and associate. The Chicago search was kept alive for nearly two weeks, but in vain.

The Robins disappearance later became a minor feature of the presidential campaign. In Chicago, on Oct. 21, Col. Ira L. Reeves, western manager of the Crusaders, sent word to battalion leaders of that anti-prohibition organization to be prepared to combat appearance of a political canard based on the disappearance "of a well known reformer and dry leader," by which reference, it was admitted, Robins was meant.

Story Tribune Printed Gives Clew to Robins' Whereabouts

New York, Nov. 18.—[Special.]—A story printed in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE early this month seemingly led to the finding of Raymond Robins in the mountains near Asheville, N. C.

This fact was revealed here tonight by Salmon Levinson, Chicago attorney and lifelong friend of Mr. Robins.

Mr. Levinson talked to Mrs. Robins, who is in Florida, on the long distance telephone and admitted that he is in possession of important facts concerning Mr. Robins' whereabouts since his disappearance, but he said he was not free to make the data public until members of the family have conferred with Mr. Robins at Asheville.

Mr. Levinson said he was the recipient of a letter which figured in the finding of the missing man. This letter, he said, apparently had come to him as the result of a story published in THE TRIBUNE.

A reader of THE TRIBUNE article, including an interview with Attorney Levinson on the Robins case, concluded that certain information in his possession might solve the Robins disappearance. This reader sent the facts to Mr. Levinson, who in turn passed the data to federal authorities engaged in the search at the instance of President Hoover.

Mr. Levinson declined to reveal any of the contents of this letter, except to say that it casts light on the case.

"We do not know yet just what happened to Mr. Robins," Mr. Levinson said. "It may have been amnesia; on the other hand, members of the family and doctors may decide that amnesia is neither the proper nor the full explanation. In the meantime, I do not care to make the letter public."

Mr. Levinson declared that Mr. Robins was a "man of iron." He said the prohibition worker had been under an unduly heavy strain due to prohibition work for some time prior to his disappearance.

"I was with him about three days before he disappeared," Mr. Levinson said.

"We were in Maine together at the time of the eclipse. I was with him a good deal of that time, and although he looked tired then, there was not any definite sign that the strain of his work was telling on him sufficiently to cause a breakdown of any kind."

A Washington dispatch said the White House planned to get in touch with the New York police in connection with the locating of Mr. Robins. At police headquarters, however, it was said that no word was received from the White House or from any other sources about Mr. Robins.

FRIENDS HERE SURPRISED.

Chicago friends of Raymond Robins missing social worker whose reappearance was announced last night at the White House in Washington, said that the announcement came as a complete surprise to them. None of his friends and associates in this city is known to have seen Robins since a few days after his disappearance last September, when several persons who knew him reported meeting him in the loop.

SKETCH OF HIS CAREER

The career of Raymond Robins, member of President Hoover's unemployment commission, embraces such varied activities as gold mining, law, social service and politics.

He was born in Staten Island, N. Y., 59 years ago, and was reared in the mountains of North Carolina. He became a mining prospector at the age of 15 years, and by the age of 20 claimed to have amassed a small fortune of $12,000.

With this sum he studied law in New York City and went to San Francisco to practice. The Yukon gold rush drew him to Alaska, where he "struck it rich," settled at Nome, and introduced Christianity into the mining camp. He was dubbed "the Savior of Nome."

Robins first came to Chicago about 1905, establishing a social service organization in the old 17th ward. He became associated with Graham Taylor in Chicago commons and later with Northwestern university commons. Through this organization he eventually became a political power, and in 1916 he had risen high enough in party councils to be selected as keynoter of the Progressive convention of that year.

In 1914 he was candidate for senator from Illinois on the Bull Moose ticket, losing to Senator Sherman.

During the world war Robins was prominent in Red Cross work and in the last year of the conflict was head of a Red Cross expedition to Russia whose personnel included Dr. Frank Billings and Harold Swift of Chicago.

On his tour Robins became a fast friend of Nicolai Lenin and Leon Trotzky, the bolshevik leaders, and provoked controversies by defending the bolshevik theories on his return to the United States.

In recent years Robins has been interested principally in prohibition and social work, mainly outside Chicago. He has been active in the Allied Forces for Prohibition and in the work of the Congregational church.

Mr. Robins has been in physical struggle three times in his career, once with labor sluggers, once with bolsheviks, and once with a Protestant minister.

Beaten by Paid Sluggers.

Early in 1906, when he first began his reformer career in Chicago, he was assaulted and beaten near his home by two sluggers in the hire of Martin [Skinny] Madden, then head of the steamfitters' union, and a political power.

In February, 1912, during a labor union meeting in Pittsburgh, he became embroiled with the Rev. W. A. Prosser, Pittsburgh Socialist. He dubbed the minister an "intellectual ass," precipitating a general fight.

During his soviet tour he attempted to quell a crowd of Red guards, who were looting the Industrial Art school in Moscow. The guards hurled him into the street.

Mrs. Robins, the former Miss Margaret Dreier, a Brooklyn heiress, was prominent as a social worker prior to their marriage in 1905, and has retained a place in public affairs ever since.

Her chief fame has been as organizer and national president of the Women's Trade Union league. In 1920 she headed the women's campaign for the nomination of Senator Hiram Johnson for President. In 1928 she organized the Hoover campaign among women industrial workers. She has been active also in peace movements.

End of Long Search

AMY JOHNSON BEATS RECORD ON FLIGHT TO AFRICA

Covers 6,250 Miles in 4 Days 7 Hours.

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Amy Johnson, 28 year old British aviatrix, took the England-to-the-Cape speed record away from her husband, Capt. J. A. Mollison, by bringing down her tiny monoplane, Desert Cloud, at the Cape Town airport this afternoon four days, six hours, fifty-five minutes after her takeoff in Britain.

She was dog tired—but not too tired to dab some powder on her nose that she might make a proper appearance.

"Three cheers for our British Amy!" shouted a woman spectator as Miss Johnson climbed out of her plane.

Telephones Her Husband.

Miss Johnson's first thought was to communicate with her husband back in England. As she pressed through the throng toward the airport office and a telephone, she was informed that she had cut 10 hours and 24 minutes from her husband's record for the same flight.

"As much as that?" she asked. "I thought it was only by about an hour. I am sorry in a way that I beat him, but it was awfully sporting of him to inspire me to undertake the attempt."

Tonight she slept soundly at the home of a friend—the name of the friend was not divulged in order that she might not be disturbed—and meanwhile government officials made plans for celebrating her feat.

Five Hours' Sleep in Four Days.

"I had just five hours' sleep coming down," she said. "It was in naps of two hours, two hours, and one hour. I may not show it because when I was coming over the mountain over there I powdered my face and fixed up a bit. But, believe me, I am tired."

There were two delays in the flight. The first one came after she had crossed the Sahara desert and had put out from Gao, on the upper Niger. She had not noticed that her gasoline was running low and two hours out of Gao she was forced to turn back to refuel. The second delay was at Benguela.

"I landed in a most terrible place," she said in recounting what had happened in Benguela. "It was pouring rain and I found the oil filter was faulty. It was a very hard job to fix it because the men there had no tools. I had to improvise them. I thought I would have to abandon the flight, but the fault was finally rectified and I carried on and was very glad to get out of the rain belt."

Capt. Mollison Proud.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Capt. J. A. Mollison, who never thrilled much to his own achievements in the air, was excited today when he learned that his wife, Amy Johnson, had beaten his own record for the flight to Cape Town.

"I'm so proud that she has done it," he said, "but I knew she would. This shows she has the stuff in her. For a man it would be fine, but for a woman it is splendid."

17 HURT IN BOMB BLAST ON EVE OF CATALAN BALLOT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BARCELONA, Spain, Nov. 18.—The hitherto peaceable campaign for the election on Sunday of the first parliament to meet in Catalonia in two centuries was marred tonight when a bomb exploded on one of the city's streets and injured 17 persons.

WAUKEGAN JURY CONVICTS TWO OF BANK ROBBERY

After deliberating for nearly three hours, a jury in the Circuit court at Waukegan early today returned a verdict finding two young men guilty of the robbery of the Lake County State bank of North Chicago on Sept. 7. The conviction carries a penalty of one year to life in prison.

The convicted are Clifford Heaney, 21 years old, 1649 Juneway terrace, and Ernest Rupprecht, 25 years old, 1748 West 51st street. A third defendant, Frank Wagner, 19 years old, 5352 North Marshfield avenue, was found not guilty, although several of the bank employes identified him as one of the bandits.

In the robbery, in which the loot was $2,000, a woman bookkeeper, Mrs. Monetta Steffen, was shot and seriously wounded. Five men were in the robber band, one of whom has never been apprehended. Those placed on trial and Joseph Beck, 19 years old, 5407 Justine street, were all in the Waukegan jail several weeks ago when an attempt to escape was made. Beck got away and Heaney and Rupprecht were caught soon after they fled. Wagner, although offered his chance for freedom by the others, stayed in his cell, and the jury held this as a point in his favor at the trial.

A suspect who may be James [Iggy] Varecha, 17 year old mental defective who is being sought by the Chicago police as a killer and rapist, was arrested last night by Chief of Police James E. Spore of Wenona, in Marshall county.

Chief Spore reported to the Chicago police that his prisoner answered in every way the description of the youth who has been missing since the murder of Frank Jordan, former Municipal court bailiff, and an attack upon a niece of former Police Commissioner John Alcock.

"This man," said the chief, "was riding in a box car on the Chicago and Alton railroad, which came in from the east. He had passed through Streator, which is sixteen miles to the east. He is 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighs about 124 pounds with four shirts on, and has gray blue eyes and light sandy hair. He wears a pair of overalls and a dark pullover sweater."

Chicago Sends Police.

So closely did these details tally with the description given of Varecha that the Chicago police decided to send a squad to Wenona to bring the suspect here. Chief Spore said the youth claimed to be Herbert Kinman of Evansville, Ind., and asserted that he was on his way to Peoria and had come into Streator from the south.

Two suspects were still being kept behind bars in Chicago last night. They are John Collins, 23 years old, 3051 West Monroe street, and John Henry, 22 years old, 8022 Woodlawn avenue. So far there has been no identification of these men and the police announced that they were being held as a precaution.

During the day the conviction of the police that Varecha, who recently escaped from the State School for Epileptics at Dixon, was the killer, increased. Miss Henry, who lives at 5720 South Lincoln street, and James Guisinger, 22 years old, 6006 South Kolmar avenue, who was kidnaped by the lad late Wednesday night, both reported the rapist had boasted of having killed a man and of an escape from Dixon.

Frank Varecha, 19 years old, 2015 West 52d street, brother of "Iggy," was released by the police yesterday afternoon following a long questioning. Orders were given to watch closely all the former haunts of Varecha and to seize all his known associates to learn if they can throw any light on his whereabouts.

Pal of Fugitive Questioned.

One such associate was quizzed. He is James Naples, alias Napolitano, 4510 Justine street, an ex-convict. Naples declared that he had seen the mental defective youth at 45th and Morgan streets Tuesday night and had been invited by him to join him in a stickup. According to Naples, he declined the invitation.

The police are still keeping a large number of squads in the district where the crimes occurred.

Funeral servies for Jordan, who was shot down while resisting an effort of the youth to rob him, will be held at the Englewood Masonic temple, 64th street and Loomis boulevard, at 2 p. m. today.

ALUMNI OF BROWN SCHOOL STAGE A ROUSING REUNION

Graduate of '64 Among 500 Former Students.

Five hundred alumni of the Brown school, at Wood street and Warren avenue, held a rousing reunion last night in their old classrooms. Graduates from as far back as the class of '64 sat in their old seats, sang their songs, and exchanged reminiscences.

Al V. Booth, grain broker, whose job it was to ring the school bell in 1873, was chairman and introduced the old timers. He was assisted by William J. Page, the present principal of Brown school.

One of the alumni speakers, and the man who defrayed the expenses for the reunion, was Cyrus Hall McCormick, class of '74.

Exams Just as Hard.

"I'm glad to see you are all as happy and young as I am," Mr. McCormick said. "I don't think the school has changed much. They tell me that the examinations nowadays are just as tough as they were when I went to school."

Two of Mr. McCormick's classmates joined him in the celebration. They were Charles D. Michaels and John Boughan, both of whom are writers on the grain market. Mr. Michaels writes for THE TRIBUNE and Mr. Boughan for the Associated Press.

Elliot S. Goodsmith, 1245 Early avenue, who was graduated from the school in 1864, was present. Charles T. Walker, 83 years old, of the class of '66, came from his home at 410 South 17th avenue, Maywood, to attend. Another oldtimer was Harry Greenebaum, 5401 Cornell avenue, class of '73.

Women Graduates.

Among the women attending were Mrs. Fannie S. Reeder, 78 years old, 2340 Monroe street, class of '49, and Mrs. William C. Dunwell, 78 years old, class of '70. Mrs. Dunwell has lived at 1907 Monroe street for the last 65 years. She was a Chicago school teacher for 18 years, resigning in 1892.

The Brown school, which celebrated its 75th anniversary last June, was the eighth to be built of the nearly 400 in the Chicago system. Its graduates include: Mrs. Bertha Honore Palmer, Thomas [Tad] Lincoln, Lillian Russell, Miss Amelia Sears, Miss Fanny Butcher, Samuel Ettelson, Harvey T. Woodruff, Edgar Rice Burroughs, Judge Daniel Trude and Helen Morgan. The late Flo Ziegfeld was at one time a pupil there.

VIENNA, Nov. 18. — (AP) — Delays caused by import and foreign exchange restrictions were blamed today for the deaths of 200 songbirds which were being transported across Austria. It pointed out that 200 birds being sent from Italy to Czechoslovakia died of starvation in Austria before permits for their importation and payment could be obtained.

OWNER SPURNS U. S. BID TO BUY BLARNEY STONE

CORK, Irish Free State, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Sir George Colthurst, owner of Blarney castle, emphatically denied a report from Cleveland, O., that part of the famous "Blarney stone" had been removed to that city. Furthermore, he said, the stone is not going over to the United States.

[The Blarney stone is believed by many to confer the faculty of persuasive eloquence on all who kiss it.]

"We have had numerous offers for the castle, one from an American syndicate which proposed moving the castle in entirety to America—an offer my father refused," Sir George said.

"The stone is in such a part of the castle that it could not be removed unless the building were torn down. Year after year we find people gathering pebbles from the ground around the castle. There is more blarney stone sold from Germany alone than would build six Blarney castles."

SIMPSON JR. WINS CONGRESS SEAT BY 1,222 VOTES

Official Canvass Shows Republican Victory.

James Simpson Jr., Republican, was elected congressman of the 10th district, and will be given the certificate of election, it was announced yesterday at the completion of the vote canvass by County Clerk Sweitzer and the election commissioners. Simpson's plurality over Charles H. Weber, the Democratic candidate, in the Nov. 8 election, was given as 1,222 votes.

JAMES SIMPSON JR.

Final tabulation of the 344 Chicago precincts of the 10th district was not completed yesterday, although the canvass was officially closed. Therefore, the election commissioners having jurisdiction in the city territory, did not proclaim official figures.

Same as Police Returns.

Fred V. Maguire, president of the election board, said that the final figures were practically the same as the police returns, and on that basis the vote was as follows:

	Simpson.	Weber.
Chicago	60,206	76,685
Cook county towns	23,494	12,595
Lake county	18,971	17,169
Total	101,671	100,449

Ralph Church, at present a Republican member of the state legislature, polled over 42,000 votes as an independent candidate.

Simpson is a son of James Simpson, former head of Marshall Field & Co., who succeeded Samuel Insull as chairman of the board of the Commonwealth Edison company and other utilities. Young Simpson won the Republican congressional nomination, defeating Congressman Carl R. Chindblom and Representative Church, but had to go into a recount to get it. On the face of the primary returns last April Simpson was beaten by Church.

Church Also Files.

The recount took place during the summer months and the nomination was awarded to Simpson late in October, just in time to have his name certified by the secretary of state as the official Republican candidate. Church immediately filed as an independent candidate.

Simpson's campaign pledges were that he would vote for repeal of the 18th amendment and economy in governmental expenditures.

The completion of the election board's canvass apparently resulted in the defeat of Municipal Judge Samuel Heller, Republican, by Irwin J. Hasten, Democrat, although the proclamation to this effect was not made, pending decisions on contested votes.

SENATORS URGE HALF A BILLION BUDGET SLASH

Two Democrats Make Economy Pledge.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—[Special]—A half billion dollars can and should be cut off the total of last year's regular appropriations at the coming session of congress, it was stated today by Senator Kenneth McKeller [Dem., Tenn.], member of the special senate economy committee and one of the leaders of the fight at the last session to cut government costs and abolish useless bureaus.

The Tennessee senator declared that if all other methods failed he stood ready to do what he did last year when he introduced resolutions sending five appropriation bills back to committee to be slashed 10 per cent.

"Through these cuts and through the economy bill," he said, "we succeeded in cutting costs 334 millions below the budget estimates for regular appropriations. This year the cut should be 500 millions."

Including 322 millions for emergency construction and excluding 725 millions covered by the estimated postal revenues and 150 millions to be saved by the economy act, last session's appropriations for 1933 totaled 3 billion, 826 million dollars. As proposed by Senator McKellar the half billion dollars cut would not take into account the 322 millions for emergency construction and so would bring appropriations down to less than 3 billion, 100 million dollars.

Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], who will be chairman of the senate finance committee in the next congress also promised economy.

"The Democratic party," he said, "is pledged to rigid retrenchment and economies in government operations, and so far as I am concerned I hope we can apply the knife and abolish every useless function of the government, and effect as large a saving in government expenditures at this session as possible.

"There are two ways to balance the budget, either through economy or by increasing taxes. I prefer the former."

where," the governor said. "The regular session meets in January."

"Yes," Comrade Weissman chimed in, "but in the next six weeks many people will be dying."

"Don't Be Silly," He Says.

"Don't be silly," the governor replied. "We have plenty of money to last until the next legislature meets."

"But they aren't spending any money now," Weissman persisted.

"The first thing for you to do is to get your case presented to the relief commission. Have you seen them yet?"

"No," admitted Weissman.

"Now be practical about this thing," the governor went on. "I'll arrange for a meeting with the commission. Have your data and statistics ready and we will do everything we can."

After a bit more repartee along the same lines the trio picked up their hats and went, somewhat sheepishly, to the street.

Cardinal Is Caller.

Cardinal George Mundelein of Chicago spent more than an hour with Gov. Roosevelt today on a social visit. The cardinal had been attending the conference of the Catholic church in Washington, had gone up to New York for a visit, and stopped in at the governor's mansion on his way home to Chicago to greet the President elect. The cardinal was accompanied by Msgr. Robert C. Maguire of Chicago and Charles C. Pettijohn of Rye, N. Y., capitalist, both friends of Mr. Roosevelt and the cardinal.

The rest of the governor's day, part of which he spent at his desk in the capitol, his first visit there since his election as President was taken up in conference with Raymond Moley, robust grayed college professor, whose advice on economic issues has been at the governor's disposal during the campaign and who will accompany Mr. Roosevelt to Washington next Tuesday and join in his conference with President Hoover on the war debts question.

Roosevelt Quotes Prayer.

In issuing a Thanksgiving proclamation today, in his capacity as governor of New York, Mr. Roosevelt included in it an old prayer, from the "Book of common prayers" in which an appeal is made for the "Forgotten Man," who was so often invoked by the governor as a presidential candidate.

A part of the prayer, which the governor said might be fittingly joined in by men and women of all creeds on Thanksgiving day, follows:

"Let thy Fatherly goodness be upon all that Thou hast made. Remember in pity such as are this day destitute, homeless or forgotten of their fellow men."

McAlester, Okla., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Convicted of the poison murder of his first wife, the Rev. S. A. Berrie, hymn writing cleric, became a life termer in the state penitentiary today. Berrie married 19 year old Ida Bess Bright less than two months after the death of the first Mrs. Berrie.

DIPLOMATS ANGRY AS FRANCE CANCELS 'I GOTTA DRAG' STARS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Nov. 18.—The diplomatic corps here is seething with indignation tonight over what many diplomats consider an unpardonable violation of international etiquette.

The French government, without explanation or warning, canceled diplomatic license plates which were used to ease past red lights the automobiles of several hundred embassy and legation attachés and their families. From now on only full fledged ambassadors or ministers will have the right to ornament their radiators with the precious "CD"—Corps Diplomatique.

There has been a hasty exchange of "notes verbale" among the members of the corps and a decision was reached to request the various home governments to give French dignitaries abroad "the works."

At the American embassy it could not be confirmed that an official protest suggesting reprisals was sent to Secretary of State Stimson, but one attaché, in explaining how Washington authorities reserve low number plates for the diplomatic corps, opined that the plates for the French embassy would be up in high figures next year.

W. PARK BOARD IS INSOLVENT, SARGENT SAYS

Refuses to Reveal More About Audit.

"All I will say about the west park system is that it is hopelessly insolvent."

This was the comment of Fred W. Sargent, president of the North Western railroad and chairman of the citizens' committee concerned with public finances, after a meeting yesterday at which an audit of the west park board was discussed.

The report that accompanied the audit was said to be "too hot" to give the public any intimation of its disclosures. One member of the committee who read it said its contents should be given to a grand jury. The meeting was called to discuss a course of action on the disclosures concerning the park system's finances. It has been reported that when Thomas J. Courtney becomes state's attorney next month he will be asked to take cognizance of the diversion of bond and special assessment funds to pay rolls.

"The subject was deemed so important that it is to be taken up by the full committee," Mr. Sargent said, explaining that only the executive committee of the citizens' groups met yesterday. "The banks must be taken into consideration before any decision is reached, and I expect to call a meeting of the entire committee within thirty days."

Four Copies of Report.

The report, of which four copies are said to be in existence, and of which Mr. Sargent and President W. R. James of the west park board have one each, was prepared by the auditing firm of George Rossetter, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, and is to be paid for with public funds.

President James refused to reveal the contents of the report, which is said to contain harsh criticism of the management of the finances of the west park system during the three years he has been president of the board. It is known that he conferred with Gov. Emmerson, who appointed all the members of the present board, concerning the report and the possibility of a grand jury investigation of his and his fellow commissioners' conduct in office.

Diversion of Funds Shown.

From a previous audit it was learned that the west park commissioners have been going in debt a million dollars a year more than the park board's income in the three years during which the present board has been in control. It was disclosed that the board diverted bond issue money and special assessment bond funds for pay roll purposes, according to the auditor, and is in default on special assessment and improvement bonds. The pay roll was loaded down with political henchmen, according to charges which have not been denied.

According to some members of the citizens' committee, President James has promised to discontinue any practices found objectionable by the committee and the auditor. It was pointed out, however, that his term of office and that of his colleagues will end when Judge Horner takes office as governor in January. According to Mr. Sargent, it appears impossible to collect by taxation sufficient money to refinance the park system and save the parks for the taxpayers.

ANOTHER KRYL DAUGHTER WEDS IN SPITE OF GIFT

The marriage Thursday in New York of Marie Kryl, concert pianist, apparently did not invalidate the promise of her father, Bohumir Kryl, Chicago bandmaster, to pay her $100,000 if she remained single until she was 30. Miss Kryl celebrated her 30th birthday more than a year ago.

In 1916 Bohumir Kryl offered his daughters, Marie and Josephine, then 16 and 18 years old, respectively, $100,000 each if they reached the age of 30 without marrying. He objected to romance as likely to interfere with their musical careers. Josephine renounced her reward in 1924 by eloping with Paul Taylor White, Boston composer.

In 1930 Marie announced that she, too, was prepared to forfeit the reward by marrying Spiro Hadji-Kyriakes, a Greek musician of noble birth. Her father forgave her for her intentions and promised to give her the $100,000 anyway, but the engagement was broken later.

ADMINISTRATOR TO CONTEST WILL OF PLANE VICTIM

Halbert O. Crews, public administrator, yesterday served notice that he will contest the will of the late Joseph F. Hirt, head of the Forest Products Engineering company, who with his wife, Inez, another woman and two children, were killed in an airplane accident at Kempville, Tenn., on Nov. 10. The public administrator appeared before O. S. Caplan, assistant to the Probate judge, and charged that Hirt's will, giving his entire estate to his business partner, Thomas De Blois, 1901 Granville avenue, was invalid. A hearing will be held today.

Crews charged that the document filed as a will is merely a partnership agreement and asserted that Hirt's estate should be inherited by his only known heir, a brother who lives in Michigan.

HALF A MILLION IN STATE JUNKET FUNDS UNSPENT

Some May Be Salvaged as Economy Move.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Computations made in the statehouse today show that during its regular session in the spring of 1931 the legislature appropriated $606,500 for eighteen state commissions and that only $150,000 of this sum has been spent, to date. The appropriations were made for the biennium ending July 1, 1933.

This raised the question of how much of the remainder—almost half a million dollars—could be saved the state and allowed to accrue to the general revenue fund, by lapse, at the end of the biennium. Only one of the commissions has used every cent of its appropriation, although the figures might change hourly as expense bills are received at the state auditor's office and paid. Another has but $1.13 left in its account. The appropriations for three commissions, totaling $57,500, are still untouched.

Horner to Cut Commissions.

One of Governor Elect Henry Horner's campaign promises was that he would prune "useless" commissions and bureaus from the appropriations tree. He is even now in French Lick, Ind., studying past state budgets with a view of trimming and curtailing wherever possible. His principal pledge was that he would cut the taxes by a reduction in governmental expenditures. It is certain that he will call a halt if any "commission" he believes useless is proposed to the next session of the assembly.

The largest sum appropriated by the current legislature was $350,000 for the Century of Progress exposition. The records kept by William H. McLain, chief warrant clerk in the office of State Auditor Nelson, show a balance of $303,704.70 in that account. It is assumed that most of this will be expended for the completion of the Illinois Host building on Chicago's lake front.

Excluding the fair appropriation, the largest made for any of the 18 commissions was for $50,000, in a bill introduced by Representative Joseph L. Rategan [Dem., Chicago] to pay expenses of holding the 1933 American Legion convention in Chicago in 1933. None of this sum has been spent.

Mexican Friendship Board.

Also unspent is the $5,000 appropriation made for the Illinois Mexican friendship commission, sponsored by Representatives George W. Blackwell [Rep., Chicago]. The legislative digest of bills explains that this commission's duties are "to visit Mexico, study its industrial, labor, agricultural and commercial problems and endeavor to create a friendly attitude toward Illinois and its products."

The corporation laws commission, sponsored by Representative John P. Devine, [Dem., Dixon] and carrying a $2,500 appropriation, has also spent none of its sum. Its duties are to revise the corporation law and report to the next assembly.

All the other commissions have spent all or a part of their appropriations, according to Mr. McLain's records.

Several $25,000 appropriations were authorized, and one for $40,000. The latter was given to the Illinois aeronautics commission in a bill introduced by Senator Richard R. Meents [Rep., Ashkum]. There is at present a balance of $14,061.51 in its account.

$25,000 for Europe Junket.

One of the $25,000 appropriations was made for the commission on prisons, paroles, and probation, which went to Europe in the summer of 1931 to visit prisons in the British Isles and on the continent. This trip was much publicized as a junket. The bill for the commission was introduced by Senator Richard J. Barr [Rep., Joliet], majority leader in the upper chamber. There is still $7,907.16 left of the appropriation.

A like sum of $25,000 was authorized for the Illinois commission on taxation and expenditures by another bill introduced by Senator Meents. Mr. McLain reports a remaining balance of $16,138.52.

The Chicago regional port commission bill, carrying a $15,000 appropriation, was introduced by Representative M. L. Igoe [Dem., Chicago]. The unspent remainder is $6,679.87.

Old Age Commission.

The commission on poverty and dependency in old age was allowed $25,000. There is a remaining balance of $12,387.71. The judicial advisory commission at the request of Senator A. S. Cuthbertson [Rep., Bunker Hill], had $10,000. Of this, $6,583.80 remains.

The mining investigation was given $12,000, in a bill introduced by Senator Charles H. Thompson [Rep., Harrisburg]. There is still $6,920.02 in that account.

The commission to investigate the need for vocational institutions was authorized to spend $2,000. Of this $1,317.32 remains. The Wakefield National Memorial association [the Washington's birthplace commission] received, from a bill introduced by Representative Anna Wilmarth Ickes [Rep., Hubbard Woods], $5,000. All of this was spent. The Washington bicentennial commission, at the request of Representative William G. Thon [Rep., Chicago], had a $5,000 appropriation. There is a $1.13 balance.

The deep waterway commission was given $15,000, at the request of Senator Martin B. Bailey [Rep., Danville], and has spent all but $6,178.66. The world war veterans' commission, by a bill introduced by Representative Richard J. Lyons [Rep., Mundelein], received $5,000. There is still $4,921.62 of this left.

The two remaining commissions of the eighteen are the state road program commission and the buy Illinois products commission. The first received $5,000. Its account shows a balance of $2,308.94. The second, by a bill introduced by Representative Homer J. Tice [Rep., Greenview], was given $10,000. Of this, $3,390.39 remains.

The totals of appropriations and expenditures of the commissions show that $606,500 was appropriated and $450,000.85 remaining; thus $156,499.15 has been spent.

Bandits Shoot Husband, Beat Wife

Christ Andersen, bakery owner, who was seriously wounded by bandits last night, and his wife, Alfreda, who was beaten. Andersen was wounded when he went to the aid of his wife.

Battle in Bakery

Chris Andersen, 55 years old, was shot and seriously wounded and his wife, Alfreda, was beaten in a battle with two robbers last evening in the Andersen bakery at 1511 Devon avenue.

Mrs. Andersen was alone in the shop when the bandits entered. Her husband was in the flat above. When the men demanded money Mrs. Andersen screamed and attempted to fight them. Her husband, hearing her cries, ran down and grappled with one of the pair. The other fired at short range, a bullet striking Andersen in the back. Mrs. Andersen was felled by a blow from a pistol butt.

Taking the contents of the cash register, about $50, the robbers fled. The Andersens were taken to the Rogers Park Community hospital.

It is believed by police that the same bandits committed five other robberies earlier—at 2710 Lincoln avenue, 604 Fairbanks court, 3658 North Western avenue, 3856 North Kedzie avenue, and 3145 North Western avenue. Loot in these stickups totaled about $125.

1,000 HURRICANE WAIFS ADOPTED BY 2 RICH CUBANS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Nov. 18.—Two wealthy Havana men have taken as their wards 1,000 orphans of the hurricane. The children, boys and girls ranging in age from 2 to 14 years, will be fed and educated until they are 21 years of age.

Alfredo Hornedo, publisher of El Pais-Excelsior, Havana's largest daily, will convert one of his large city properties into an institution for 500 of the orphans. Ramon Crusellas, wealthy business man, will provide for 500 more at his camp five miles east of Havana. The children were brought here by train today from Camaguey province.

Typhoid fever, malaria and hunger continued to rage today in the hurricane zone. Desperate efforts are being made to counteract the epidemics, which threaten all the survivors of the storm. Eighty-five victims were added today to the 168 who died yesterday, and 250 new cases were reported.

Quebec Reduces Prices of Best Whisky and Gin

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 18.—Substantial reductions in liquor prices were announced today. A 26 ounce bottle of best whisky or gin will be 40 cents cheaper, and a 40 ounce bottle will be 60 cents cheaper under new schedules given out by the Quebec liquor commision. Recent reductions in excise taxes are responsible for the cuts, which follow similar reductions in liquor prices of other provinces.

CARLSON MAPS 6 MILLION CUT IN STATE COSTS

Offers Economy Program for Assembly.

Belleville, Ill., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Pointing the way to a six million dollar economy by the 58th general assembly, in an opening attempt to reduce the cost of Illinois' government, Senator Martin R. Carlson of Moline, chairman of the commission on taxation and expenditures, addressed the Illinois Manufacturers' association in district convention here tonight.

Drastic eliminations of the 29 city courts in Illinois, all state automobile and inheritance tax investigators, the Illinois Farmers' institute and the state geological survey, the 23 state free employment offices and the state board of welfare, and the reduction by $3,000 of the salaries of the seven Supreme court, 28 Superior court, and 71 Circuit court judges, and the cutting by half of appropriations to a score of other state agencies were Senator Carlson's recommendations.

For $5,929,674 Reduction.

Declaring he was only touching the surface of economies in government, which are imperative if relief is to be brought to overburdened taxpayers, the senator detailed proposed slashes in appropriations totaling $5,929,674 for the next biennium.

He gave three reasons for the crisis. "First," he said, "the sixty year old state constitution, which applies the uniform rule on all property taxation, does not permit the legislature to classify property and apply different tax rates.

"Second, disputes in Cook county over 1927 valuations and further disjutes over 1928-'29 reassessments have delayed collection of taxes and seriously handicapped the state and every tax spending body in the county.

"Third, we are faced by a vast army of idle, who must be cared for with sustenance and shelter.

State Faces Emergency.

"We of Illinois," he added, "are face to face with an emergency such as we have never had before, and we cannot and must not consider it in any way but in a serious manner.

"We must all cut the cloth, as it were, to fit the back. We must do away with some functions of government not deemed absolutely necessary.

"There could be mergers of counties, mergers of one room school districts. We could eliminate entirely all city courts, of which there are twenty-nine. The last special session cut salaries in the amount of $51,610 a year, but this is merely a drop in the bucket, and if you would cut all salaries it would hardly show in the next tax rate, but public officials should reduce salaries as well as others."

Reductions as recommended were as follows:

Elimination of 25 auto investigators at $1,800 annual salary, saving $126,000 for the biennium.

Fifteen auto investigators at $1,500, saving $45,000.

All inheritance tax attorneys of the state treasurer's office, saving $75,000.

All inheritance tax attorneys of the attorney general's office, saving $176,000.

All City court judges, saving $190,000.

All Circuit court reports, saving $303,000.

Twenty-three free employment offices, saving $463,993.

The state board of welfare, saving $27,130.

The Illinois Farmers' Institute, saving $74,200.

State salaries of 102 state's attorneys, now $400 a year, saving $40,800.
Agricultural advisors, $112,800.
Bovine tuberculosis eradication, $800,000.
Food inspectors, $190,800.
Deputy game wardens, $212,000.
Department of forestry, $20,000.
Tax commission, $24,000.
Factory inspectors, $180,905.
Industrial commission, $330,000.
Mines and minerals, $107,395.
Lodging house inspectors, $45,025.
Social hygiene, $80,445.
Supervisors of parolee, $195,200.
Visitation of adult blind, $45,686.
Visitation of children in family homes, $107,735.
Parole board, $161,800.
Criminologist and institution for juvenile research, $234,065.
Psychopathic institute, $81,846.
Division of standards, $25,000.
Grain inspectors and samplers, $163,201.
Fire prevention, $87,320.

Economies outlined, he said, would permit a four cent reduction in the state tax rate, and other economies under consideration may reduce it still more.

Card Player Is Shot to Death; Assailant Escapes

Peter Mordalyck, 2941 Wentworth avenue, was shot and killed yesterday afternoon as he sat playing cards in a pool room at 3013 Wentworth avenue by Robert Sandelich, 45 years old, 13358 Houston avenue, who fired from a doorway in the rear of the room. Witnesses told the Pekin Inn police the two men had quarreled in the pool room Saturday night. Sandelich escaped.

FORMER CHICAGO COUNTESS SUES SECOND HUSBAND

[Copyright, 1932, By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Nov. 18.—The former Alice Silverthorne of Chicago, niece of Mrs. J. Ogden Armour of Chicago, is seeking a divorce here from Raymond de Trafford, socially prominent young Englishman, whom she married in Paris last February and who at present is in Australia.

Mrs. de Trafford met her present husband in Kenya, British East Africa, in 1926. At the time she was married to a French nobleman, Count Frederick de Janze. Her friendship with De Trafford continued after their return to Paris. In 1927 she shot and dangerously wounded De Trafford in the Gare du Nord here before turning the weapon on herself in a suicide attempt.

Both lingered at the point of death for several weeks in the same hospital. After both had recovered she was convicted in the Paris courts and received a suspended six months sentence. Later she was pardoned by President Doumergue. Meanwhile, Count de Janze had obtained a divorce and a Roman rota annulment.

Mrs. de Trafford is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Silverthorne of Riverside, Ill.

Nine Seized for Robbing Helene Costello of Gems

JUDGE ORDERS TAXES PAID ON PURE OIL BLDG.

Tribune Map Discloses Receiver's Neglect.

Immediate payment of at least $150,000 of the taxes due on the Pure Oil building, Wacker drive and Wabash avenue, was ordered yesterday by Superior Judge Denis E. Sullivan. At the same time Judge Sullivan rebuked Receiver Charles J. Young for not paying the taxes previously and suggested that his failure to do so called for his resignation as receiver.

The judge said he was astonished yesterday morning to note in the map, one of a series being published by THE TRIBUNE, that no taxes for 1930 had been paid on the Pure Oil building. He remembered that the building was in receivership in his court, and knew also that it was an income producing property with a large amount of cash on hand.

$40,000 a Month Income.

He called Receiver Young before him and asked for a report on the building. He was told that the building produces a gross income of $40,000 a month and that the receiver had $184,775 in cash on hand. The report showed that $451,064 in taxes are due on the property for the years 1928, 1929, and 1930, no attempt having been made to pay any taxes on the building since 1927.

"Why haven't you paid the taxes?" demanded the judge. "My order appointing you receiver provided for the payment of taxes. If I hadn't happened to see this map in THE TRIBUNE I would not have known of the failure to pay taxes. I can't keep the details of the hundreds of receiverships in this court in my mind and I must depend upon my receivers. I think you'd better hand in your resignation."

File Tax Objections.

Receiver Young protested that objections had been filed in court that the taxes were excessive.

"That is no excuse for not making at least a partial payment," said the judge. "How do you think the city and county can function without tax money? This is an outrageous example of nonpayment of taxes. At least $150,000 of the cash on hand must be paid to the county treasurer within two days."

"The bondholders' committee——" began Young.

"Are you cooperating with the bondholders' committee or with this court?" asked the judge. "I notice that your bond is only $50,000. What security has this court when you allow $165,000 in cash to accumulate?"

Judge Sullivan revealed that on Nov. 3 a letter had been sent to all the receivers in cases pending in the Superior court ordering them to report before Dec. 1 on the properties they have in charge, including the amount of general taxes owing and an explanation as to the reason for failure to pay these taxes. The letters were signed by Judge Sullivan as head of the chancery division and the two other chancery judges, Robert E. Gentzel and William J. Lindsay.

Pay $2,000,000 in Taxes.

"We at least can see that all properties in receivership pay their taxes if they are able to," said the judge. "We have ordered the payment of $2,000,000 in taxes since Jan. 1, and every dollar that can be spared will be paid into the county treasury for taxes. No distributio. of funds in receiverships will be allowed until the taxes have been paid."

THE TRIBUNE this morning publishes another of the series of maps showing parcels of property upon which no 1930 taxes have been paid. Five such properties were found in the triangular block bounded by Wacker drive, Michigan avenue and East South Water street.

The shaded areas show those parcels of property upon which the taxes have been paid partially or in full. The white areas reveal the properties upon which no taxes have been paid.

From County Records.

The facts and figures given on the map and in this story were gathered from the county treasurer's tax books. The names given are those to whom the tax bills are addressed. These persons and corporations in many instances are merely the agents of or lessors to the persons who are actually liable for the bills. The records are as of Nov. 14.

The parcels of property found in the area upon which the 1930 taxes remain unpaid, according to the records, follow:

Chicago Title and Trust Co., Tr.	4,385
No owner listed	6,427
Murray Wolbach, 105 South Dearborn street	27,374
Roy D. Keehn, 1416 Otis building	47,218

The first two items listed above are shown on the tax books as being owned by Nathan William MacChesney, 30 North La Salle street. Mr. MacChesney explained that he had disposed of the properties to the Chicago Title and Trust company before the 1930 taxes were due and has no connection now with the properties.

The following taxpayers, according to the tax books, had made the following payments or partial payments on parcels of property in the block:

Frank S. Pagin & Co., 36 South Dearborn street	6,795	6,795

REVIVE REPORT THAT JAPS SEEK FINANCIAL HELP FROM FRANCE

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Nov. 18.—The presence of the large Japanese delegation to the league of nations in Paris for five days before going on to Geneva for the discussions of the Lytton report has again revived reports that Japan is seeking financial aid to carry out its expensive program in Manchuria.

The French foreign office has been steadily denying knowledge of any such attempts or that there is any question of French participation. It is considered certain, however, that the Japanese need money badly and have been approaching French banks in an effort to induce them to invest money in Manchukuo.

Thus far they have had no success. The reason is believed to be that the government has been exerting pressure against aiding Japan because of the inevitable effect it would have on world opinion, particularly in the United States.

TRIAL OF KUHN $100,000 SUIT IS POSTPONED

The $100,000 suit of William S. Kuhn Jr., former brokerage clerk, against William Van Doren Wright, steel company executive; Miss Marion S. Wright, his debutante daughter; Alexander Jamie, chief investigator of the Secret Six, and two of Jamie's assistants was continued until Monday yesterday by Judge Peter H. Schwaba, who is hearing the case before a jury in the Superior court.

The postponement was taken because Attorney Frederic Burnham, who represents young Kuhn, was out of town. Miss Wright is expected to take the stand for the defense when the hearing is resumed.

Kuhn is asking damages on a charge of false arrest and malicious prosecution. Two years ago he was charged with sending extortion letters to Miss Wright, whom he knew socially. After being held several days by the Secret Six he was booked on a charge of attempted extortion, which was later dropped.

OUST ATTORNEYS FROM HEARINGS OF APPEAL BOARD

Clerks in the board of appeals discovered yesterday that a group of lawyers who frequent the board rooms have been solicitin. clients among the men and women who appear to make objections to their 1931 personal property tax assessments. The lawyers, according to the clerks, offered to help the complainants when they appeared before the board for hearing.

When board members were notified they ordered the group of attorneys to leave the county building. Later they said that they would place charges of barratry against any other lawyers who attempted similar practices.

"No one who comes before this board with a real complaint needs any attorney to represent him," said the board's statement. "It is unnecessary for any taxpayer to spend money to hire a lawyer to protect his interests here, and we urge citizens not to engage attorneys for these hearings."

MANCHURIAN WAR OPENS IN GENEVA; FIRST ROUND A TIE

Sino-Japanese Envoys Trade Slaps.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Nov. 18.—Two days before the league of nations council is due to take up the report of the Lytton commission on Manchuria, hostilities broke out today on the Geneva front between the Chinese and Japanese.

Japan's special representative, Yosuke Matsuoka, arrived with a large delegation and this afternoon at a tea party for the world press said that he wanted to make it clear that "we have been Manchuria's protector of what is known as international order, as established by treaties, as well as the internal order of the country."

Rejects Lytton Report.

Matsuoka reiterated Japan's rejection of the Lytton recommendations. Manchukuo, he said, offers the best guarantee both to local interests and foreign rights. He added that that is why Japan "intends" that the state of Manchukuo shall be continued and he hoped that the league could understand that "there is no other course Japan can take."

Japan has not been the aggressor, he said, and he charged that China is in a state of chaos and constitutes a danger to world peace, since it aids the spread of anarchy.

To this challenge Quo Tai-chi, Chinese minister to London, who negotiated with the Japanese on the Shanghai front last spring, arose. Quo was not at the tea party, of course, but issued his statement from another part of town. He said Matsuoka was talking in "puerilities."

Cites Japanese Assassinations.

"So far as the relative administrative ability of the two countries goes," he said, "China has managed to proceed in civilian administration without recourse to assassination, which now is almost routine in Japanese political differences. Also, the civilian government in China has at least as much control of military policy and operations as the government of Japan has been able to exercise in the past year and a half."

From the tone of this first engagement, a lively session of the council is foreseen. Tonight's combatants both had their training in American universities, Quo at Pennsylvania and Matsuoka at Oregon.

The formal Japanese reply to the Lytton report, which is expected to be released this week-end, is 300 pages in length.

Soviets to Refuse Pact.

MOSCOW, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The government newspaper Izvestia said today that soviet Russia would not sign a nonaggression pact with the new Manchurian state of Manchukuo without the simultaneous signature of a similar pact by Japan with Moscow.

The paper was commenting on suggestions appearing in Tokio newspapers that a Russo-Manchukuo treaty would guarantee peace in th far east.

"Such a proposal makes no serious impression here," Izvestia said, "when it is considered that Manchukuo and Japan have a military agreement under which the Japanese army assumes guardianship over Manchuria, thus making Manchuria a country in which the military control is in the hands of another nation."

FOUND DEAD IN HOME.

Corbin, Ky., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Henry Macom, 48, district manager for an Aviston, Ill., milling company, was found dead today in the bathroom of his home here. Officials said he apparently had ended his life by swallowing poison. He is survived by his widow and two children.

Because it gets better results the Chicago Tribune during the first ten months of 1932 printed more than 450,000 more lines of want advertising than any other Chicago newspaper.

STONE OFFICIAL ADMITS FUND FOR BONDS WITHHELD

Default Used to Aid Trades for Stock.

Marshall W. George, secretary of H. O. Stone & Co., defunct real estate investment concern, admitted yesterday under cross-examination that officials of the Stone company withheld information that funds were available to pay off a bond issue in order to persuade investors to trade their bonds for Stone common stock.

George appeared as a witness in his own behalf in the federal court of Judge Charles E. Woodward, where he and eight other Stone officials are on trial on charges of using the mails to defraud.

On direct examination he told of a bond issue of $180,000 on the Park Manor building which was defaulted when it came due on March 1, 1930. Cross-examined by Assistant United States Attorney Thomas Dodd Healy, George was shown a telegram sent to Stone salesmen on March 18, 1930. He admitted sending the wire.

The contents, read to the jury, told the salesmen that funds were available to pay off the Park Manor bonds. The salesmen were instructed in the wire to withhold the information from investors for three days and during that time to continue the policy of trading Stone common stock for the defaulted bonds.

Questioned by his attorney, Elwood Godman, on direct examination, George had testified concerning a meeting in which Stone officials appeared before the stock exchange listing committee. The president of the committee asked why the Stone company had not maintained a permanent bid on the Stone stock for several months, the witness said. The committee was told that conditions were such that the company could not support such a bid. Told by the president of the committee that such a situation was "embarrassing," the Stone officials agreed to take the stock off the exchange, George said.

The members of the exchange committee also said that they "heartily disapproved" the Stone practice of selling common stock for less than the market quotation, the witness said.

"We expressed surprise that the committee should disapprove, but agreed to stop the practice," George said.

"Was anything said about Vanderpoel [R. P. Vanderpoel, a financial writer]?" Attorney Godman asked.

George said that the Stone officials had asked Vanderpoel to find out if the practice of selling common stock under the market quotation in an escrow agreement was in violation of the exchange rules. Vanderpoel investigated, George said, and assured them that they were not violating the rules.

SHIPPING TO GULF CALLED QUICK AID TO FARM STATES

Tax Proposals Heard by Shannon Committee.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Opening of the Illinois waterway a short time hence and the establishment of the water route between the great lakes and the Gulf of Mexico will begin at once to remove the economic squeeze exerted upon the agricultural midwest by the Panama canal. So the Shannon congressional committee was told yesterday by Arthur J. Weaver, former governor of Nebraska, in the closing session of five days' hearings at the Palmer house on government in business.

ARTHUR J. WEAVER [Associated Press Photo.]

Mr. Weaver argued that protection is needed by river carriers against rate slashing by the railroads on goods carried between river ports, and that what is required is a national transportation policy. His address was a forerunner of matters to be taken up at the annual convention of the Mississippi Valley association at St. Louis next Monday and it summarized two days of waterway argument before the Shannon committee.

A tax on boats and tonnage on the new lakes-to-gulf waterway was advocated by Mr. Weaver, with an important proviso that similar taxes should be laid on vessels using Atlantic and Pacific and great lakes harbors, the Hudson and Ohio, and other water improvements outside the Mississippi valley and the Panama canal, on which the government has spent $737,000,000.

Sees End of U. S. Barge Line.

If the government will keep the railroads from making cut throat rates along the Mississippi-Illinois route, the government would get rid of the federal barge line within a year was the supplemental argument of Cleveland A. Newton, counsel of the Mississippi Valley association.

"The reason the government put the barges on," he said, "was to remove the obstructions which drove private barges off the waterways."

At the end of Mr. Weaver's talk he was thanked by Congressman Robert F. Rich of Pennsylvania, who had been exhibiting a rather antagonistic attitude toward the inland waterways.

"I say," remarked Mr. Rich, "let's stop expenditures on the sea coast for a time if necessary to cut cost of government and give the west a fair shake by putting on the screws and cutting expenditures somewhere else."

"I'm opposed to the government being in any kind of business," said Mr. Weaver in his summary, "unless it is necessary for protection. The federal barge line should not be maintained any longer than necessary. It should be charged with an expense for taxes, maintenance, just the same as a private concern.

Demands Parity of Treatment.

"All private operators should be subject to a per unit boat tax and a tonnage tax, and this should apply to operators in seaboard harbors and great lake ports, as well as on inland waterways. All we seek is parity of treatment.

"We are asking no more for the west than has been already done for the east, and for the water facilities around the rim of the United States. The people are entitled to the cheapest form of transportation they can get. I believe the highways and waterways should be kept open all the time. This inland waterway system is now almost complete. The federal barges have been in experiment. They have been worth while, but they have no place in permanent business."

Argues for Deepening Rivers.

Arguments for deepening of the upper Mississippi and Missouri rivers were made by Mr. Weaver.

"The upper Missouri and Mississippi are outlets for an important section," he said. "The great grain producing states are entitled to an outlet to the sea. The Panama canal has placed a constriction upon this area in favor of the east and west seaboards. The Missouri has been improved to Kansas City. It should be opened to Omaha and Sioux City. On that river are four of the great packing centers of the United States. The Ohio was improved at a cost of $100,000,000. The Illinois waterway is now almost complete and will be of inestimable value to the entire country, once the channel is open from the great lakes to the gulf.

"All we are asking is equality with other sections, especially to reach the great grain area through Kansas City, Omaha, Sioux City, where water transportation will mean a difference of 4 cents a bushel on wheat.

"The agricultural states out here have lost sixteen congressmen. Why? Because we haven't received our share of natural growth. Waterway states have gained twenty-five congressmen. It's not pork barrel legislation we are asking. We are not for the Missouri, the Mississippi, nor the Illinois alone. We are for the development of the rivers and harbors of the whole country as a unified national system. It has been developed on the coasts and the great lakes, and now it is the turn of the upper Mississippi and Missouri. Since the Panama canal was opened Seattle and San Francisco can ship some commodities cheaper to Chicago and Detroit than can some parts of Nebraska."

Rail Attorney Gibes Witnesses.

An ironical counter argument was made by Bruce Dwinell, counsel for the Association of Railway Executives.

"In three minutes," he said, "I desire to summarize the testimony of the waterway witnesses as follows:

"We are against the government in all business except the transportation business.

"We believe the expenditure of 200 million dollars on inland waterways is wise because there will be great savings in transportation costs. Enormous quantities of freight will be carried on these waterways, and this diversion of traffic will eventually help instead of hurt the railroads.

"Before the government retires from the barge business, the law must be changed. These barge lines, in their port to port business, are unregulated, while the railroads are fully regulated. No further regulation of the barge lines should take place. To fully protect the private operator on the water, railroad regulation should be extended to the point that the barge line operators will be guaranteed a practical monopoly of the transportation of the materials which they find it most advantageous to handle.

"We believe this summary demonstrates the weakness of the position of those who believe the government should be in the barge business. It shows that inland waterway transportation cannot stand on its own feet."

Attacks Barge Line Accounting.

The bookkeeping of the Inland Waterways corporation, the federal barge line, was attacked by F. J. Lisman, New York banker and specialist in railroad securities.

"The improved showing of the government barge line," he said, "is due largely to decreased charges for depreciation and to a tremendous increase in capital."

Chairman Joseph B. Shannon of Kansas City interrupted: "Maj. Gen T. Q. Ashburn, director of the federal barge line," he said, "testified that depreciation should not be charged against earnings."

"I don't know how much bookkeeping they teach at West Point," answered Lisman, "but they teach obeying orders. If Gen. Ashburn is told to make the lines pay, he shows the lines are paying. The federal barge lines issue a report showing a net profit of $166,000, when if they figured depreciation, it would show a deficit of $2,500,000."

Hits Government Hospitals.

A protest that government hospitals are encroaching in an unwarranted way upon private hospitals was presented by Paul H. Fesler, past president of the American Hospital association.

"About five billion dollars are invested in hospital buildings in the United States," he said. "This is the fifth largest industry. About 50 per cent of the beds in the private hospitals are vacant. Many of these beds are available for the care of ex-service men who could in many instances be better cared for in the local hospital and by the local physician, and at less cost to the government. I file a list of 30,000 beds which have been offered to the government for the care of ex-service men, most of them at a cost less than the cost of caring for such patients in government hospitals."

De Luxe Coal Yard in Capital.

As a finale attention of the Shannon committee was directed by Milton E. Robinson, a Chicago coal dealer, to the de luxe government fuel yard at Washington, from which coal is delivered to the new marble palaces of the departments and bureaus. His argument was that private dealers in Washington could do the work better and far cheaper. He submitted figures that the federal yards last year delivered 177,866 gross tons by truck to government buildings in the national capital. He spoke of a fleet of 34 government coal trucks and said the cost of handling the fuel was $1.78 a ton.

"In comparison with this $1.78 a ton," said Mr. Robinson, "the local dealers for the four years before the government yards were opened ranged between 31 cents to $1 for handling coal, and the average cost at the private yards for the four years was 57 cents."

M. J. Insull Wins Third Delay in Extradition Trial

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BARRIE, Ont., Nov. 18.—The third adjournment was taken today in the extradition proceedings against Martin J. Insull, fugitive Chicago utilities operator, now under indictment on charges of larceny and embezzlement. The defendant's counsel, J. R. Boys, requested more time to gather depositions. An extension of two weeks was granted. Before the first adjournment was taken Insull was released on $50,000 bail. A second adjournment was taken Nov. 4.

CONGRESS BEER ADVOCATES GAIN ADDED RECRUITS

Southern Members Join Modification Ranks.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—More recruits today joined those members of congress who will vote for modification of the Volstead act at the coming session of congress.

Particularly notable were the members from the once politically dry south who came out in favor of beer.

"I am in favor of carrying out the party's pledge of modification of the Volstead law, permitting within constitutional limits the manufacture and sale of beer. I don't know about passing a modification measure at this session, since this congress was not elected on that issue. But if the treasury's deficit continues I see no reason for delaying three months.

"The doubtful factor is the attitude of President Hoover. I do not know what his attitude is, but I doubt whether congress could pass a modification bill over his veto."

McKellar Supports Beer.

Senator Kenneth McKellar [Dem., Tenn.] said he was ready to vote for modification or repeal at this session or whenever the legislation came up.

"I am a teetotaler and my state is a dry state. I voted against the beer plank in the convention. But the Democratic party campaigned and won the election on a platform pledging repeal and beer and as a party man I am ready at this session or at any time to carry out that pledge."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.] declared that Michigan's vote repealing the state prohibition law was proof of the popular demand for a change.

"I shall vote at the December session to send the repeal question to the states. Revision of the Volstead act in behalf of beer is limited by the eighteenth amendment until repealed. Within this limitation some liberalization undoubtedly is possible. The Michigan referendum must be interpreted as supporting liberalization. I shall vote for such liberalization as stays within the constitution."

Promises Special Rule.

Representative Edward W. Pou [Dem., N. C.], chairman of the house rules committee, promised a special rule to assure a vote on beer if necessary in the lower chamber.

Representative Pou has been a dry, but he declared he was convinced that the states alone could enforce prohibition laws.

Representative George Huddleston [Dem.], a state rights dry from bone dry Alabama, came back to Washington determined to vote for repeal. "I was not so sure about beer, but said he would vote for modification of Volsteadism if it could be done without nullifying the eighteenth amendment.

Unqualified support for repeal and beer was promised by Representative James W. Collier [Dem., Miss.], chairman of the ways and means committee, wher the beer for revenue bill probably will be drafted.

Representative George Holden Tinkham [Rep., Mass.], pioneer crusader for outright abolition of national prohibition, came down from New England full of optimism for both repeal and beer pending the day when the 18th amendment is removed from the constitution.

STATE TO AID ADMINISTRATION OF LOCAL RELIEF

The Illinois Emergency Relief commission yesterday announced that a plan has been evolved by which the commission will assist relief committees in the various counties to administer funds made available for relief through the diversion of the counties' shares of the state gas tax. The plan was requested by several counties in order to utilize the existing relief organizations in administration of the gas tax funds.

"In counties electing to adopt this plan," E. L. Ryerson Jr., chairman of the state relief commission, said, "the existing relief machinery will continue to function without interruption. The district auditors of the commission will continue to approve bills for payment and the basic relief principles adopted by the commission will be adhered to. The only difference in procedure will be that the bills will be paid by the different counties instead of by the commission."

Inquest Finds Peterson Accidental Fall Victim

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict that Theodore A. Peterson, 50 years old, official of a metal specialties company who plunged 22 stories to the street from a room in the Stevens hotel Thursday, died accidentally. Torn bits of paper gathered by police in his room showed that Peterson had started a note beginning, "My dear Beth. When you get this——" The widow, Mrs. Beth Peterson, 6862 Paxton avenue, testified that he suffered from dizzy spells.

CONSUL FOUND DEAD, ANOTHER ILL BESIDE HIM

Liquor in Room Will Be Analyzed.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—The consul general of Honduras, Jose A. Membreno, 63, was found dead in a room in the Victoria hotel here today, while the consul general of Panama, Adolph Aleman, lay unconscious beside him.

Cause of Membreno's death and Aleman's illness was a mystery and a sweeping investigation was being conducted tonight by police detectives. Deputy Coroner Brown announced his belief that Dr. Membreno had died as a result of an ailment from which he had suffered for some time. Dr. Aleman, when revived, said he blamed liquor of which they had partaken.

The two envoys had attended a colorful ball last night given by the foreign consular corps in San Francisco at the fashionable Fairmont hotel on Knob hill and then retired to the Victoria hotel, where Membreno lived.

A partly filled bottle of whisky was found in Membreno's room. It was taken in charge by Coroner T. B. W. Leland for analysis.

Detectives learned that Membreno had been suffering from diabetes for two years. An autopsy was ordered performed tonight to determine whether the disease might have caused death.

According to attachés of the Victoria hotel Membreno and Aleman came into the hotel about 2 o'clock this morning. An hour and a half later Membreno telephoned the night clerk asking that a physician be sent to the room.

Dr. Everett Carlson was summoned and reported that he found Membreno pacing the floor of the room and Aleman lying on the bed complaining of pains in his stomach. Dr. Carlson told police Aleman had been drinking and he believed his condition was due to overeating and overdrinking. He prescribed a sedative and left.

This afternoon Dr. Carlson sent some medicine to the room. A bellboy went to the room to deliver it. When he received no answer to his knock on the door he entered the room with a pass key and found the Honduran envoy dead and Aleman ill.

Aleman, after treatment at the emergency hospital, was taken to a private hospital, where his wife has been ill for several months. Dr. A. C. Reed said he was suffering from "overindulgence" and predicted his recovery.

BRITISH INSIST DEBT PAYMENT WILL HURT U. S.

Says Transfer of Money Would Curtail Trade.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Lord Rothermere's Daily Mail, which coined the term "Uncle Shylock" and applied it to the United States a few years ago, has started a new campaign to convince America that Britons are thinking only of America's good in asking to be excused from payment of Britain's debts.

An editorial in the Mail today began by saying that nothing short of absolute inability to pay will induce Britain even to consider such a deplorable step as default if America insists on payment, and then goes on to try to show why America in its own interest should not insist.

Says Trade Will Suffer.

If Britain must pay in December, the Mail says, it will so disarrange its finances that the pound will decline still further and Britain will have to increase tariffs so as to decrease imports, thus hurting United States trade. This, the Mail says, will be followed by a further fall of commodity prices and a decline of stock exchange values, which, it says, will also hit America. In short, the Mail declares, whatever America may gain in debt payments it will lose and more in shrinkage of export trade.

There is no doubt that the uncertainty about America's actions is affecting trade and finance in England. The pound fell today to $3.26½, which is near last December's low water mark. British financial authorities are pessimistic and predict a further disastrous fall if America refuses to extend the moratorium, and it is believed that there will be a further fall when the payment is made Dec. 15. Some even predict that the pound may go as low as $3.

(The pound sterling closed in Chicago yesterday at $3.29¾. This was after the London markets had closed. In New York the pound rallied to $3.30¾, and then fell off to $3.29¾, where it closed.)

Many Regret Debt Move.

Many of the wiser public men now regret that Britain took the lead in the European demand for debt postponement and revision. They declare that the progress being made at the Geneva disarmament conference has been having a good effect on European trade and finance by holding out hope for a substantial saving from arms reduction and by lessening the danger of war.

All of this is counteracted by the effect of the request for a reduction in the war debts, which, they say, has led to the general belief that the condition of European nations is much worse than it really is and has nipped the bud of reviving trade. No one now even pretends to believe that the American congress will consent to postponement of the debt payments. The extent of British hope is that congress will consent to talk over revision after the December installment has been paid.

Urges Payment in Gold.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Asserting that gold standard nations, headed by the United States and France, are seeking to make Great Britain's early return to the gold standard a condition for the holding of the world economic conference, and that Great Britain's refusal to accept a virtual ultimatum to this effect was the real reason for the abandonment of the preliminary talks at Geneva this week, the financial editor of the Laborite Daily Herald tonight urged the government to make the December war debt payment in gold. By so doing, he said, it could "get a lot of quiet amusement out of American financial authorities."

"The payment of gold," he said, "would naturally make it more difficult for Great Britain to return to the gold standard. And, as the United States is one of the countries chiefly concerned in trying to persuade Great Britain to return to the gold standard, war debt payments under such conditions might provide her with a practical lesson in the difficulty of simultaneously pressing two divergent policies and would give to an otherwise wholly digressing mixup an ironic flavor slightly exhilarating in circumstance."

WIFE DIVORCES R. H. THOMPSON FOR DESERTION

Mrs. Clara Cary Thompson, 35 years old, was granted a divorce yesterday by Judge Joseph Sabath in the Superior court from Robert H. Thompson, former owner of the Moffett photographic studios. Mrs. Thompson charged desertion. Her testimony was corroborated by Mrs. Jane Cary, wife of her brother, Dr. Eugene Cary, with whom she now lives at the Drake hotel. Thompson, whose studios went out of business two years ago, now lives at the University club. Mrs. Thompson waived alimony and support for her two children, Barbara, 12 years old, and Peter, 2, whose custody she was given. She received a settlement out of court, according to Attorney Lloyd Faxon, Thompson's counsel.

Rapist Sent to Prison Without Trial by Jury

Michael Wojcik, 26 years old, was sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary yesterday by Judge Philip L. Sullivan for the rape of Mrs. Cora Miller, 51 years old, 736 Milwaukee avenue. The state charged that Wojcik attacked and beat Mrs. Miller in a vacant lot on the 900 block in Erie street two months ago. He then took her to a flat at 951 Erie street, according to the testimony, and again attacked the woman. She escaped and notified the police, who captured Wojcik in the apartment. Judge Sullivan heard the case without a jury.

78 Rebels Deported by Brazil Reach Portugal

LISBON, Portugal, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The Brazilian steamer Siqueira Campos arrived today with 78 deportees aboard. All were sent out of Brazil after the recent abortive revolt against the régime of Provisional President Getulio Vargas. Among the group were Gen. Bertoldo Klinger, six other generals, and 32 officers, politicians, and journalists.

3 GIRLS ACCUSE FURRIER FREED BY COURT WRIT

Police Recount Previous Charge by Child.

Adam Durica, 53 years old, 1733 String street, a furrier, who escaped most of a ten months' Bridewell sentence last February by means of a writ of habeas corpus, was under arrest yesterday on a charge of attacking three school girls. The charge on which he was previously liberated also was made by a young girl.

Durica's latest victims, according to Sergt. Michael Naughton of the Scotland Yard detail, are two 11 year old schoolgirls and one 12 year old girl. They are being held at the juvenile detention home pending the outcome of the investigation.

Freed on Writ by Judge.

According to Sergt. Naughton, Durica defeated his original sentence through a writ of habeas corpus issued by Judge Joseph Burke, serving only 48 days of the 10 months' sentence imposed for contributing to the delinquency of a minor. Judge Burke could not be reached last evening for an explanation of the habeas corpus hearing.

Sergt. Naughton said Durica was arrested on Feb. 6, when he attacked a young girl living in the vicinity of Halsted and 18th streets. He was charged with rape, but the charge was changed to a misdemeanor in court and the minor sentence in the Bridewell was imposed.

Girls Accuse Furrier.

The investigation in the present case began when detectives from the Scotland Yard detail happened to investigate the conduct of one of the young girls. When questioned she told the police that for a period of two years Durica had lured her to the basement of her home with money, candy and fruits, and then attacked her. She named the other two girls and they also told of being attacked by the furrier.

Durica is being held without formal charges, pending the completion of the investigation by the police.

Student Suspended

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The reinstatement of Milton Galatsky, 16 years old, a sophomore at Lindblom High school who was suspended from school on Nov. 10 for preaching defiance against school rules, against the R. O. T. C. in the school and against the celebration of Armistice day, is being sought by a group of pacifist organizations, it was learned yesterday from Principal Harry Keeler of the school, who has referred the matter to Superintendent of Schools William J. Bogan.

Mr. Keeler said Galatsky was suspended because of "a long series of disobedient acts, insolence and general defiance of school rules." The boy lives at 5538 South Washtenaw avenue with his parents. Principal Keeler said the boy's case has been taken up by the Civil Liberties union, the World Congress Against War, and the Women's International League for Peace.

DREAM OF SMALL ALL METAL HOME IS COMING TRUE

Steel Mills Plan Building on Wholesale Scale.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 18.—[Special.]—The construction of all-metal small homes on a wholesale scale, long the dream of visionary architects, soon will become an actuality if plans of the leading steel mills, revealed today, are carried out.

Already several sectional steel residences have been constructed in the Bronx and a Long Island builder recently completed a development in which all of his houses were erected with steel frames. One New York architect has gone considerably further and produced a miniature home in which there is neither stone nor wood. In his all-metal house he has installed air heating and cooling, done away with windows and made every room soundproof.

The steelmakers, however, have no such revolutionary plans. Early next year, according to Charles F. Abbott, executive of the American Institute of Steel Construction, handbooks of instruction to residential builders describing how to construct steel homes will be issued by the larger steel mills.

No Increase in Cost.

"As a result of numerous experiments in the erection of houses of steel," said Mr. Abbott, "methods now have been developed which warrant the industry to believe small homes of steel construction may be built at no increase in cost over other types.

"New inventions in air conditioning, improved methods of heating and lighting, better walls, floors and ceilings of steel will bring more durable residences at lower cost and will render many of the existing buildings obsolete once the demand for space revives."

Mr. Abbott pointed out at the meeting here of the members of the steel industry that such homes would be in great demand when there is a general upturn in business and they would aid the steel industry in gaining new outlets. He said builders were now preparing to construct steel homes on a large scale and that such industrial cooperation would be a leading influence in fostering trade recovery.

Put House Together in Three Hours.

Entirely apart from the campaign by the steel mills, trail blazers here have been constructing steel houses for the last two years. Peter Mueller, a Bronx builder, recently completed a steel dwelling of four rooms and bath. The walls and other parts of the house were built in sections. Three workmen with the aid of a crane put the walls and roof together in three hours. A concrete base holds the walls in place.

Mr. Mueller says his sectional homes could be turned out in large quantities if the demand grew. The house in the Bronx, near White Plains, has attracted many visitors.

One of the original metal house architects in New York is Buckminister Fuller. Mr. Fuller goes all the way when he designs a home and his latest creation is known as the dymaxion house. The model looks something like an inclosed merry-go-round. He says it could be fitted together with the precision and speed of automobile assembly. Its floors are metal triangular plates, its walls double pane vacuum plates.

Same Temperature Always.

Thermostatic control keeps its interior the same temperature the year round and a central lighting system illuminates the whole place. The dymaxion house, or something similar, may itself become a reality next year, for an organization has been formed to market a mail order "machine age residence."

WOMAN IS SENT TO PRISON FOR $49,000 THEFT

Miss Katherine V. Carroll, 34 years old, a former secretary of the Hopkins-Benedict company, a railway supply concern at 80 East Jackson boulevard, was sentenced to serve one to fourteen years in the penitentiary yesterday by Judge John J. Sullivan on a charge of forgery.

Judge Sullivan overruled the defense motion for a new trial and Miss Carroll's plea for clemency with the statement that the defendant's testimony was the "most flagrant perjury he had ever encountered." Miss Carroll was found guilty by a jury several weeks ago. The state charged that she had taken $49,000 over a period of three years.

Because it gets better results the Chicago Tribune during the first ten months of 1932 printed more than 450,000 more lines of want advertising than any other Chicago newspaper.

HITLER TO MAKE BID TODAY FOR GERMAN RULE

Flies to Berlin for Talk with Hindenburg.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—Adolf Hitler, leader of Germany's powerful National Socialist (Fascist) party, arrived in Berlin by airplane today to make his bid for the chancellorship left vacant by the resignation of Franz von Papen and his cabinet of aristocrats and militarists yesterday. The former Austrian house painter will confer with President Paul von Hindenburg tomorrow, at which the president will set forth the policy he intends to follow in dealing with Germany's cabinet problems.

The Nazi leader refused to talk of the governmental crisis or of his chances of becoming chancellor, but political observers agreed that he would leave no stone unturned to overcome the 85 year old field marshal's objections to him.

"Man to Man" Conversation.

"I am greatly satisfied to be able to talk with President von Hindenburg as man to man without a chancellor acting as chaperon," was Hitler's sole remark.

Capt. Herman Goering, Nazi president of the old reichstag, also is rushing to Berlin by plane to take part in tomorrow's negotiations. He is returning from Rome, where he has been attending the European Fascist congress.

"Twelve million Germans look to their leader, Hitler, awaiting his decision," Der Angriff said. "Whatever he decides is right."

In the meantime the "kaiser's henchmen" are trying to wreck Von Hindenburg's attempt to create a government which at least would be tolerated, if not actively supported, by the new reichstag. As the situation now stands, no party or group is able to swing a majority.

Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, leader of the former kaiser's nationalist party, conferred with the president today. He announced that his party will do everything in its power to prevent the formation of a cabinet which is forced to rely on a parliamentary majority.

"We want an authoritative government relying solely on the president's power," he said.

Without the Nationalists, it is practically impossible for the "conservative National forces" to obtain a majority in the reichstag. The Steel Helmets—an association of war veterans—also appealed to Von Hindenburg to "retain a government free of parliamentary control."

Asks Forceful Leadership.

"Germany wants forceful leadership, independent of party politics, to start the peaceful work of reconstruction," Franz Seldte, Steel Helmet commander, telegraphed the president.

Von Hindenburg today issued a new emergency decree in an attempt to solve the confusion created in Prussia by Von Papen's overthrow of the regular government and its partial reinstatement by the Supreme court. The president ruled that all acts of state must be carried out by the dictatorial commissars he has appointed. He also drastically curtailed the rights of the regular cabinet.

Fearing that the political uncertainty of the next few weeks will result in new riots, the federal government has ordered the political truce prolonged until Jan. 2. All open air political gatherings, parades, and demonstrations are forbidden.

Wife Frisks His Pockets of Money to Pay His Fine

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Pasquale Terasino had saved $5 to pay a fine for a motor vehicle law violation, but——

"My wife went through my pockets and took the money," he told Police Judge William M. Harney.

"I'll grant you another stay until Nov. 25," ruled the judge. "Tell your wife that you are going to jail if a payment is not made at that time."

Cashier Steps on Switch and Robbers Flee.

Westville, Ind., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Tear gas frustrated the attempt of two heavily armed bandits to hold up the Westville State bank, 12 miles south of Laporte, this morning. Blinded by tears the bandits found their way to an automobile in which three other men were sitting in front of the bank and fled.

Fifteen minutes later the bandit car was reported seen speeding through Gary bound for Chicago. Chicago police were notified. Police squads were sent to the southeast section of the city to head off their flight. All squads were notified to be on the lookout for the bandit car. No trace of the bandits could be found.

L. R. Cass, president, and J. R. Recktenwall, cashier were alone in the bank when the bandits entered. They were ordered to lie on the floor. As he bent down to comply with the command Cass stepped on an electric switch which filled the banking room with tear gas, locked the cash drawers and sounded an alarm.

One of the bandits fired two barrels of a sawedoff shotgun at Cass as the gas was released. The discharges passed over his head when he dropped to the floor. The other bandit attempted to carry off a cash drawer, which had not closed. He was frightened by the burglar alarm and dropped the drawer. More than $500 rolled to the floor, but the bandits were unable to see in the cloud of gas.

POLA NEGRI'S FORMER HUSBAND, IN COURT, INSISTS HE IS BROKE

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Although he drove to court in an expensive sedan, Prince Serge M'dvani, Pola Negri's former husband, and Mary McCormic's present husband, insisted to Bankruptcy Referee N. I. Mulville that he is flat broke.

He explained he owes about $50,000 in court judgments, in all, and said there is a possibility this may shortly be increased to $150,000 on account of a $100,000 suit which Miss Negri has pending against him. He told the court that the apartment he lives in and the auto he drives are both the property of Miss McCormic.

At the conclusion of the examination he was discharged as a judgment debtor by Referee Mulville.

YOUTH IS SEIZED ON CHARGES OF KILLING FATHER

New York, Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Twenty year old Emil Kissel was arrested by Brooklyn police today and charged with having shot his father to death Sunday night because he was upbraided for going out nights. A confession by the youth's 14 year old sister that the family had framed an alibi for him finally led to the arrest, police said, after detectives had found a bullet in the Kissel home similar to the six bullets in the slain man's body.

The victim, Konstanty Kissel, 59, a contractor, was found on Shore road near 77th street, Brooklyn, Sunday night, and died on the way to Norwegian hospital. At the Kissel home his wife, Helen; the daughter, Irene, and Emil all said that they had been walking with the father that night, but that he had left them at 72d street and 5th avenue, saying: "I'm going over to Newark to look for a job."

But after persistent questioning Irene admitted today, police said, that Emil and his father had left them together and that later when Emil returned home alone he had said: "If anybody comes, don't say I was with dad, say we were all together."

Suspicion was first directed against the son when police learned of a quarrel between the boy and his father Sunday night.

Police revealed that among Kissel's effects was a $10,000 insurance policy which provided that double indemnity would be paid in the event of violent death.

Irene Kissel, who said she is a radio performer, is being held as a material witness.

Mrs. John B. Stanchfield Files for Reno Divorce

OPPOSE SHIPWAY BY ST. LAWRENCE AS TAX BURDEN

Foes Also Insists It Will Not Benefit Country.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—The first phase of the senate foreign relations committee investigation of the St. Lawrence seaway treaty was brought to an end today. A week from Monday opponents of the pact will be given another opportunity to attack the treaty. Proponents of the seaway will have their innings just before the convening of congress.

Telegrams placed in the record as the hearings were recessed made it apparent that opponents of the treaty are to base their main attack on the treaty on the grounds that the St. Lawrence project would prove too great a burden to American taxpayers, that it will not benefit any section of this country, that it proposes to internationalize Lake Michigan, and that it would disrupt American transportation facilities and industry.

Transportation Costs Cut.

Although the state department and other proponents of the treaty providing for joint development of the St. Lawrence river for navigation and power have not yet been heard, the consensus of opinion in congressional circles is that the pact will have to go over to the incoming Roosevelt administration for final action.

Three telegrams received by members of the committee disclose how widespread is the opposition to the St. Lawrence poject. One came from Fred Sargent of Chicago, president of the North Western road; another from J. H. McMillan, president of the Cargill Elevator company of Minneapolis, and the third from the board of commissioners of New Orleans. The Sargent telegram was received by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, but not made public. In this communication Mr. Sargent explained why he and other western rail presidents now are fighting the St. Lawrence project.

Mr. MacMillan told the committee that ratification of the St. Lawrence treaty would not lower freight costs on export grain more than a cent or two. He asserted that completion of the Welland canal by Canada give this country the principal freight savings benefits claimed for the St. Lawrence by its proponents.

Denies Saving is Great.

"There has been an immense amount of misrepresentation as to the possible benefits to be gained through completion of the St. Lawrence seaway," he said. "One form of misrepresentation widely quoted has been to the effect that the deepening of the St. Lawrence will save the producer 10 cents a bushel in the export movement of grain. This saving was never possible, although until the completion of the Welland canal a year ago, making possible the movement of large upper lake boats some 200 miles nearer the American seaboard, there was a possible saving of 7 or 8 cents.

"The extent to which the completion of the Welland canal has reduced the costs of moving grain from western lake ports to tidewater can best be gauged when we state that we ourselves will have moved by the close of navigation some 13,000,000 bushels of grain since July 1, none of which has cost more than 5 cents a bushel some of which has cost as low as 3½ cents with an average of perhaps 4½ cents a bushel."

Mr. MacMillan estimated that with the better development of lake terminals on Lake Ontario the average cost could be reduced to 3¼ cents a bushel.

Sees Canada Gain by Shipway.

"Inasmuch as ocean boats cannot be expected to come to western ports for nothing," he continued, "a very elementary analysis shows that the probable savings will be exceedingly small, probably not to exceed a cent or so per bushel. It is extremely doubtful if the average exports of American grain which would move via the proposed route would exceed fifty million bushels per year. If so, the saving to the farmer would not exceed a million dollars per annum, an amount which certainly does not justify the hundreds of millions contemplated by this treaty.

"In the case of Canada the gain is much greater as in an average year she may move from 300 to 400 million bushels via this route—the benefits to Canada probably are from six to eight times those expected for the United States."

New Orleans Fights Treaty.

In its telegram the board of commissioners of New Orleans stated they viewed with alarm the proposed ratifying of a treaty providing for "the practical internationalization of Lake Michigan."

"The state of Michigan or the United States," the board states, "is expressly forbidden by the St. Lawrence treaty to divert any waters from Lake Michigan in excess of 1,500 cubic second feet without the authority and consent of the international commission. The board of commissioners cannot and does not favor this project and is opposed to ratification of the treaty."

The New Orleans telegram marked the second time within two days that the Chicago diversion has been brought to the attention of the committee. Yesterday W. H. Chandler, manager of the trade bureau of the Merchants' Association of New York, warned the committee it should view with alarm a treaty proposing to internationalize Lake Michigan and curb diversion of water through lakes to the gulf route.

Drainage Canal Gulf Outlet.

"The Chicago drainage canal," he said, "is an outlet to the gulf. We have a right to open our own waterways to the people of this country. If you, by this treaty, are going to dry up your connection between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi river and say the people are not entitled to an adequate diversion because of this St. Lawrence project, I will say you are in a rather weak position.

"I would not give Canada a lookin on that. I would show this country that we had enough guts to stand up for our own rights. There is no reason why we should permit Canada to come in and dictate the amount of water that is to flow from Lake Michigan into the sanitary canal."

STATE AUDITOR REPORTS ON TWENTY CLOSED BANKS

State Auditor Oscar Nelson yesterday made public reports of the receivers of 20 more closed banks. The reports give the financial condition of the banks as of Sept. 30.

The reports disclose the gross cost of receivership of the 20 banks together with that for 20 banks previously reported is 3.6 per cent of the money collected by the receivers, and the net cost, after deducting the operating income of the banks, is 3.4 per cent.

Liquidation Costs Told.

DEMOCRATS MAP MORE WAYS OF SAVING MONEY

Plan to Reduce Cost of Liquidating Banks.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

French Lick, Ind., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Democratic winners in the Illinois state election ten days ago are still widening the scope of their money saving plans for the benefit of the people of the state.

Two new advances in this field were learned today. It was disclosed that before their departure from the party conference here Edward J. Barrett and Judge Otto Kerner, winners for the posts of state auditor and attorney general, respectively, agreed to seek concentration of the affairs of the many closed banks of the state in the hands of a few receivers and attorneys in order to reduce the losses to depositors by lowering the costs of liquidation.

Successors a Problem.

In the second instance of an effort at economy the leaders are seeking to find a way to avoid the cost of a special primary as the first step toward filling the vacancy on the Probate bench to be created by the impending resignation of Judge Horner.

No definite plan has been approved for the final filling of this vacancy, which will be filled for a time by the temporary taking over of the probate field by County Judge Jarecki or some downstate Probate or County judge, but there is an inquiry into the question of the advisability of amending the statute to provide for the nomination of candidates for the Probate judgeship by county convention as nominees for the Circuit and Superior benches are selected now.

May Be Elected in June.

If the convention method should be made effective soon enough a new Probate judge for Cook county could be elected at the same time as the 20 judges of the Circuit court next June.

It is understood that while their plan of decimating the number of receivers and attorneys now sharing in the assets of closed banks, particularly in Cook county, was agreed upon fully, Auditor Elect Barrett and Judge Kerner have been witholding any announcement of their intentions because they wanted to be sure of the legal possibilities before making a statement.

Would Cut Number of Receivers.

"But," said one who participated in their talks, "they will go every inch of the way that it is possible in reducing the costs of the receiverships. We now have hundreds of political receivers and political attorneys cutting into the assets of closed banks. There is no reason why one receiver cannot handle a number of banks, with one attorney for the group. It is believed that upon the proper motions the courts will approve this plan."

The crowd of Illinoisans here is down to about one-fifth of its original size, but the talks behind closed doors still center around such subjects as these two. Even for the county offices, such as that of state's attorney, which the Democrats are to take over early next month, there have been no selections of assistants made.

Courtney Undecided on Aids.

Senator Thomas J. Courtney, who will succeed State's Attorney Swanson, said that he and those with whom he will advise when he makes his selection are milling over a number of names for important assignments, each trying to clarify his own opinion before the subject is taken up definitely for disposition. He has not even selected the man who will be his first assistant.

He expects to attend the meeting of the legislature next week, his last appearance at Springfield as a lawmaker, before taking up his duties as a law enforcer. He will resign from the senate before taking the oath as prosecutor, as the law forbids his holding the two offices simultaneously.

WOMAN, ILL IN BED, SAVED FROM BURNING HOME

Ill with influenza, Mrs. Ralph Duffield Small was roused from her bed in her second floor apartment at 174 East Pearson street and led to safety by her maid when fire broke out late yesterday afternoon on the first floor below. Mrs. Small and her maid were the only occupants in the building at the time.

Lying in bed, Mrs. Small noticed smoke seeping through the floor of her room and saw flames shooting by outside the window. She screamed and called to her maid, Hazel Duncan, colored, who wrapped a coat around her and led her to safety.

CANADIANS ASK U. S. TO CEDE PART OF 3 STATES ON SEABOARD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 18.—Business leaders of the city of St. Johns, Que., a small town midway between Montreal and the United States border, last night unanimously adopted the following resolution:

"That the St. Johns chamber of commerce request the federal authorities to add to the St. Lawrence rives canalization pact the following: 'That in exchange for what the United States is receiving from Canada in the former Canadian section of the St. Lawrence river, the United States give us that section of the property situated north of latitude 45, in the states of Vermont, New Hampshire, and Maine.'"

H. S. Houghton of Iowa Is Made Dean at U. of C.

Henry S. Houghton of the University of Iowa Medical school yesterday was appointed dean of biological sciences at the University of Chicago, and director of the university clinic. The announcement was made by President Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago. Dr. Franklin C. McLean, former dean, has been made professor in the department of physiology.

IDLE TRY TO RAZE EMPTY FACTORY; ROUTED BY POLICE

A crowd of 500 idle yesterday started to dismantle the abandoned factory building of the Griffin Wheel company, 116th street and Cottage Grove avenue, for fuel and other uses. Two squads of Kensington police summoned to the scene found men and women using automobiles, trucks, and wagons to carry off parts of sidewalks, flooring, and window casings. One man, police said, was taking an electric dynamo and another was contemplating a crane.

Massimo Guidici, 352 East 111th street, was seriously injured in the rush for the lumber. Two rafters, loosened by the workers, fell on him and he was taken to the county hospital with a possible fracture of the spine.

Six of the wreckers were arrested and taken to the Kensington police station, where officials of the wheel company refused to sign complaints against them. John A. Donarski, an official of the company, announced that the company was going to let the abandoned factory and adjoining sheds stand idle until the first of the year, when they will be razed.

MISSING BROKER ELUDES CAPTURE; GIRL OFFERS AID

Federal and state authorities failed to find any trace yesterday of Charles L. Strauss, head of the brokerage firm of Charles Strauss & Co., who is charged in a warrant with defrauding his customers. The state authorities said they hoped that the postoffice inspectors would catch up with Strauss, who is believed to have fled to New York, and the federal authorities said they expected the prosecutor's police to locate Strauss.

Assistant State's Attorney Edwin C. Dufficy was informed yesterday that Miss Corrine Cohl, former secretary to Strauss, is in a hospital from a nervous breakdown. Her attorney said that Miss Cohl is innocent of any wrongdoing and would be glad to help unravel Strauss' affairs when she recovers. She has not worked for him for some months.

Strauss, it was learned yesterday, obtained his operating license only after vigorous opposition from the state securities division. The license was issued when Strauss' clients refused to testify against him. The license was revoked two days before the broker absconded.

Idlers Shy at Nebraska Town's Public Woodpile

Stanton, Neb., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Stanton's woodpile is helping to solve the transient problem. Charity appeals used to be made by fifteen to twenty transients a day. Street Commissioner Herman Koehn today said that since the public woodpile was established the number had dropped to one or two daily. Some days no transients have been hungry enough to ask for work.

CARLSTROM WILL ASK DISMISSAL OF 3 INTEREST SUITS

Plan to Drop Sterling and Russel Actions.

Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom yesterday prepared to ask dismissal of the interest suits pending against three former state treasurers who are alleged to have withheld public moneys during their terms of office. The attorney general, it was learned, plans to go before Judge Jesse R. Brown in Springfield this morning and dismiss "for want of equity" the suits pending there against Lieut. Gov. Fred Sterling and Andrew Russel, Republicans. Similar action is to be taken in the Cook county Circuit court, where an interest suit against William Ryan, Democrat, who was state treasurer in 1913 and 1914, has been on file.

Attorney General Carlstrom, who retires from office at the end of this year, is said to have told his assistants that he wants to clear the way for his successor—Judge Otto Kerner, Democrat—by terminating the suits started by his predecessor, former Attorney General Edward J. Brundage.

Kerner's Announcement.

The move follows closely on the announcement of Judge Kerner that when he takes office as attorney general his first official acts would be to push prosecution of the suits against Sterling and Russel and to open an investigation into the compromise settlement agreed to by Attorney General Carlstrom by which Len Small, former governor and former state treasurer, settled his "interest" indebtedness to the state of Illinois for $650,000.

During the recent campaign Democratic speakers made much of the fact that the suits against Sterling and Russell, both of whom are Republicans, were not pressed during the eight years Mr. Carlstrom, a Republican, has been attorney general.

The suits are the outgrowth of disclosures made in 1921 to the then Attorney General Brundage by Edward E. Miller, who had succeeded Sterling as state treasurer. Len Small had preceded Sterling as treasurer. At the time of Miller's disclosures Small had been governor for six months.

Miller told Brundage that when he took over the office from Sterling he found in lieu of cash a certificate showing a deposit of about $10,000,000 in the "Grant Park bank." No such institution existed.

Loan Funds to Packers.

Brundage, after an investigation, disclosed that it had been the practice of the state treasurers, including Small, Sterling, and Russel, to make pretended deposits in this mythical bank, whereas the money, in reality, was loaned to Chicago packing interests which paid as high as 8½ per cent interest. The treasurers accounted to the state for only 2 per cent interest on these funds, Mr. Brundage declared.

Small, Sterling and others were indicted on criminal charges, but only Small was tried. After a series of legal maneuvers Small was brought to trial at Waukegan and acquitted. Later indictments were voted against several persons for jury bribery during the Small trial, but prosecution was unsuccessful.

The criminal charges against Sterling were dropped in 1923 by the state's attorney of Sangamon county. Attorney General Brundage carried on civil proceedings against Small, Sterling and Russel, and eventually the Supreme court ordered Small to return to the state whatever money was found to be owed by him.

Runs Against Brundage.

In the 1924 campaign Carlstrom was a candidate against Brundage for the Republican nomination for attorney general. One of Carlstrom's campaign statements was that if elected he would dismiss the interest suits against Small and Sterling. He defeated Brundage and was elected.

After Carlstrom became attorney general he made a compromise settlement with Small whereby the latter paid the state $650,000 in lieu of interest claims of twice that amount. The $650,000 was in addition to other interest earnings Small had previously returned to the state.

Last spring Carlstrom was an unsuccessful candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, being defeated by Small. Sterling was nominated for a fourth term as lieutenant governor, but both Small and Sterling were defeated in the Nov. 8 election.

Three years ago the citizens' committee called upon Mr. Carlstrom to take some action in the interest suits. The cases were called up in the Circuit court of Sangamon county [in which Springfield, the state capital, is located], but when Carlstrom did not ask for immediate trial a continuance was granted. Nothing more was heard on the subject until Kerner took it up during the last campaign.

No Hope of State Victory.

In moving to dismiss the Sterling suit, it is said Carlstrom believes Sterling has paid all he owes. According to Patrick Lucey, a former Democratic attorney general, who has represented Sterling in the suit, the latter has paid the state $996,759 as the interest earned during his two years as state treasurer. This is about the same amount paid by Small.

Regarding the Russel suits, Carlstrom's reasons for dismissal were said to be that there is no hope of a state's victory because all of Russel's records were destroyed. Russel was state treasurer in 1909 and 1910, and for another term in 1915 and 1916. Len Small was on Russel's bond and would be liable with him if a judgment were obtained. The dismissal of the suit against Ryan is said to be on the same grounds—records destroyed and no chance of the state winning.

At the time the suits were filed in 1921, Brundage charged that the amounts of interest paid the state and the amounts withheld by the various treasurers was as follows:

	Interest paid to state.	Interest withheld.
Russel, 1909-'10.....	$ 90,500	$ 100,603
Mitchell, 1911-'12.....	100,221	33,778
Ryan, 1913-'14.....	180,955	119,027
Russel, 1915-'16.....	142,885	157,116
Small, 1917-'18.....	400,010	1,000,000
Sterling, 1919-'20.....	996,121	1,000,000

The suit against Mitchell was dismissed by Brundage, who sued him originally with the other ex-treasurers.

To Wed Director

KAREN MORLEY.

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Karen Morley [Mildred Linton] today confirmed reports of her impending marriage to Charles Vidor, young Hungarian motion picture director. Miss Morley's rise to film fame has been rapid during the last year, and the romance with Vidor, who is no relation to King Vidor, another film director, began when the pair were introduced on the M-G-M studio lot. Miss Morley said no date has been set for her wedding, "but it will be soon." She is an Iowa girl who attended college in California for a short time, and broke in as an actress through small roles in the Pasadena community playhouse programs.

FARM INTERESTS JOINING TO GET AID OF CONGRESS

Seek to End Filipino Competition.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Illinois dairymen this week are preparing to join forces with the dairymen of the rest of the nation, soy bean growers, the southern cotton planters, and the industries handling their products to obtain from the short session of congress adequate protection for their output.

The fight will open in Chicago Tuesday, when the American Association of Creamery Butter Manufacturers will pave the way in its annual convention to obtain "the kind of market protection American farmers are entitled to have." This organization is to be aided by the National Dairy union, the National Milk Producers' federation, the American Farm Bureau federation, Illinois Agricultural association, Pure Milk association, National Grange, Farmers' union, and organizations of cotton growers, and peanut, soy bean, and vegetable producers.

See End of Long Battle.

These organizations, said to represent thirty million people—either farmers or those concerned in their products—charge that the American farmer has been paying the price of supporting the Philippines. With renewed promises from senators that the senate may join with the house in action to give the Philippines independence, they see the end of a long fight to obtain duties on imported fats and oils.

W. F. Jensen of Chicago, secretary of the Butter Manufacturers' association, outlined yesterday the situation to be considered on Tuesday, as it was presented last week at a public hearing before the commissioner of customs in Washington.

The United States is consuming 40 pounds of fats and oils a year per person, Mr. Jensen pointed out. Of this, 18 pounds is butter, 1½ pounds oleomargarine, and the remainder lard, cooking fats and oils, salad dressings, etc. Much of the consumption is in the form of soaps.

The nation is producing six billion 700 million pounds of fats and oils yearly, including milk fat, soy bean and linseed oil, vegetable fats and marine oils. We import one billion 700 million pounds of fats and oils, of which about one billion pounds comes in duty free from the Philippines.

Trade Built Up Under U. S.

Almost the entire production of such oils in these islands in the Pacific has been built up in the time since they were annexed to the United States, according to Mr. Jensen. Cocoanut oil is delivered in our harbors at 2½ to 3 cents a pound, palm oil at 3 to 3½ cents, and whale oil at 2 to 2½ cents, all of which compete with domestic products.

The United States is importing four times as much of these products today as it did in 1914, Mr. Jensen declared, while all farm products have been depressed to a third or a fourth of their value at that time.

"These figures show plainly why Illinois farmers are aroused at this time," declared Mr. Jensen. "They with millions of others are being penalized, both because the cheap competition abroad and because they are expected to consume the products made there. Farmers, whose lack of buying power has thrown thousands of industrial workers out of employment, have been paying the bill for protection of the Philippines."

BEG YOUR PARDON

On Wednesday the address of the Majestic building, against which County Judge Jarecki entered judgment for $184,917 for unpaid taxes, was erroneously given in THE TRIBUNE as 22 West Monroe street. The building against which judgment was entered is the Majestic Hotel building, 29 Quincy street. The erroneous address was given on tax records, according to Assistant State's Attorney James Clancy. The Lehmann estate, owner of the Majestic Theater building, 22 West Monroe street, has paid taxes on that property in full, it was stated by Arthur H. Dixon, manager of the estate.

The 87th annual charity banquet of the Illinois St. Andrew society will be held Saturday, Dec. 26, at the Stevens hotel instead of tonight as stated in an item yesterday.

BEER BY CHRISTMAS?

Henry Ford's peace ship left an abiding incredulity regarding things that can be done before Christmas, but there are still people who believe that the United States can get beer again before the approaching holidays. That would be a rather speedy cashing in of the campaign promises and election returns. There is no doubt it would register the expressed will of a great majority of the American people, but the congress meeting in December is not the one whose membership was affected by the election. The made-over congress must wait until March.

The plain decision is for the repeal of the 18th amendment, the repeal of the Volstead act, the repeal of the Jones five and ten monstrosity, and the return of liquor control to the states which surrendered it when they adopted the amendment. These steps must be taken seriatim and with regard to the time question involved in each. The approach to the amendment is necessarily the slowest. The repeal may be long delayed. In the meantime there are opportunities to validate the party promises, to carry out the electoral decision, and to give relief.

Even under the amendment there was never any excuse for the Jones law providing excessive punishments. That should be repealed at once. Furthermore, the Volstead act is such a misbegotten piece of legislation that even as an enforcement act it is outrageous. Woodrow Wilson thought so, because he vetoed it. Enforcement methods must be corrected or, better, abandoned. There is, aside from questions of repeal, the matter of beer. That the malt beverage in common use before national prohibition can be restored is a matter of general opinion. It was not intoxicating in fact as generally used. A definition of such a beer is easily obtainable from the formulas used in the commercial breweries. The average palatable beer was about 4 per cent by weight.

Whether the light or unfortified wines which civilized countries use as table beverages can be included in the modification of prohibition without repeal is a question congress will probably consider very thoughtfully. Use is made of these wines by the most temperate countries, and to them American inebriety, especially under Volstead, is unknown.

By degrees the country will rid itself of all the bad methods by which it attempted to control the social problem of intoxicating beverages. The wisest of its citizens do not ignore the existence of such a problem. They merely ask that the intemperance which has distorted regulation be reduced to sanity. It is in this direction that the immediate release of malt beverages can be justified. The opposition to national prohibition wishes to proceed in an orderly, sensible manner to handle this social question in a way which will bring the quickest relief in conditions which have been found and pronounced unwise and intolerable. The restoration of malt beverages to legal use will satisfy natural human instincts and it will provide a substantial revenue to a financially distressed government. That is the first step, and the others will be taken in turn as the country emerges from its prohibition nightmare.

CONFERENCE FOOTBALL.

The Western Intercollegiate conference ends its football season today with a record of a very powerful aggregation of teams. They have, with few exceptions, had their ups and downs, but it is not often that this conference or any other league of athletic rivalries produces such well balanced competition. At the close of the season the teams could have been matched by chance, by the drawing of lots, with the probability of producing a finely played, if not doubtful, game in each instance.

The teams which seemed weakest at the beginning of the season developed so well during it that their later games were hard fought, even when they met opponents rated as their superiors. Michigan has been the only team to come to the final game without either defeat or tie. If this eleven has not seemed impressively superior in any of its games, its season's record does not lack impressiveness for that reason. It is a wily team getting just what it needed for a win in each instance and keeping its powerful opponents from crossing its line with a decisive touchdown.

There's been great power in the Purdue, Ohio State and Minnesota teams, and great resourcefulness in the Illinois and Chicago teams. Wisconsin has lost only one game and that by one point. Iowa from a weak start became more formidable week by week. Northwestern from the beginning seemed to have a latent genius which might at any time click and which never quite did. The '32 Purple, with almost as good an eleven as its predecessors, could not make quite so good a record. Observers of its play could see where it seemed to fall by mere inches. But good fortune, which so frequently was looking the other way, dropped right in its open hand when Rentner's pass to Potter put the ball behind Purdue's goal line. It was Purdue's achievement last year, in a post-season game which was charity in its most self-sacrificing form for Northwestern, to take an undisputed championship from Hanley's young men. It is for today's games to decide whether retribution was riding on the ball as Renter passed it, because if Michigan defeats Minnesota its clear title to the championship is in a fashion Northwestern's gift on that single play, providing Purdue comes clean from Indiana.

The great American show has not been untouched by the hard times which have hit amusements so heavily, but it has maintained its enormous attraction for the American population of college people. Its short season, its vivid rivalries, its unlimited command of printer's ink, and its fine game are sufficient to account for this.

THE HOUSING BILL.

The Illinois legislature has been so preoccupied with the problem of finding money for emergency relief in Cook county that it has continued to overlook the housing bill. It is scarcely an exaggeration to say that of the two measures the second can be of greater value in relieving distress in the community; and this relief can be attained without the addition of a five cent piece to local taxation.

The last session of congress appropriated more than a billion dollars to the Reconstruction Finance corporation for so-called self-liquidating loans. Included in the list of projects for which money was advanced was urban housing and slum clearance if regulated by law with supervision of rents and profits. Needless to say, the money is going to be spent somewhere, but none of it will be spent in Illinois unless the appropriate legislation is passed. New York, which has a housing law, has already received more than 3 million dollars for a housing project in the Bronx and will receive more. New Jersey is also in line for loans. So are Ohio, Texas, and Indiana.

Every dollar which is obtained on housing loans will mean a reduction in the demand for emergency relief. The most depressed industry in Illinois today is the building industry. The men who were employed in that industry constitute a considerable proportion of the numbers now on the emergency relief lists and every added day of idleness brings more men from the building industry to the point of destitution. If the Illinois legislature does not pass a housing law to permit federal loans in Illinois the demands for relief funds will increase. If the housing law is passed the demand for relief funds may be expected to drop off.

Objections have been raised to the bill drafted by the state housing commission appointed by Gov. Emmerson, but unfortunately the objections have not been stated clearly and therefore it has been difficult either to reply to them or to modify the bill to meet valid complaints. Under the circumstances the least that can be expected of the opponents of the measure is that they say as simply and as clearly as they can what they do not like about it. With that done it may be possible to remove any real obstacles to a prompt enactment of a housing law for Illinois.

As matters stand the income tax payers of Illinois are advancing credits to New York, New Jersey, and Texas for slum clearance and employment, while the unemployed in Illinois who might also benefit are forced to remain in idleness. The responsibility for this neglect of an opportunity rests squarely upon the Illinois legislature.

A WARNING TO PARASITES.

An extraordinary fact of the election in New York deserves more attention than is given it outside that city. Acting Mayor McKee, whose name was not printed on the ballot, received nearly 150,000 votes and, counting those thrown out on technical grounds, perhaps not many less than 200,000.

These votes had to be written in by the voter. That so many took the trouble, and for a hopeless case, demonstrates how strong is the protest against the conditions revealed by Mr. McKee in his investigation of Tammany corruption and waste. He was repudiated by the machine, but we think politicians would do well to realize that when nearly two hundred thousand voters are willing to throw their votes away as a protest and at some inconvenience to themselves there is a force behind the demand for honesty and economy in government, not only in New York but throughout the country, which is going to count in elections.

All this force needs is organization and this must be accomplished throughout the nation. Parasitic politics is a luxury the nation cannot afford. It will waste the resources essential to economic revival as long as it dares, and it must be disciplined by organized citizenship.

Editorial of the Day

FAST WORK.

[Boston Transcript.]

Former President Coolidge says that the national transportation committee, of which he is chairman, with former Gov. Smith as one of his associates, will not make a report for at least two months. But, at that, the committee will set a record for expedition in such investigations. It was appointed only a few weeks ago on the initiative of savings banks, insurance companies and other large holders of railroad securities. Mr. Coolidge denies a report from Washington that the committee has already decided to recommend the remodeling of the capital structures of the railway companies.

It is pointed out that the "writedown" policy is much discussed and sometimes acted upon in industrial circles, and this fact may have given rise to the idea that the Coolidge committee would seek to apply it to the railways. Incidentally, there is the cheerful intelligence that such readjustments of capital are regarded as definite indications of the passing of a depression. They are signs that business is adjusting itself to new conditions and preparing for a period of restored activity.

The appointment of the Coolidge committee is a reminder that the owners of the properties are parties to the railway case. In much of the discussions of rates and wages they are but a shadow in the background. The holder of railway securities is, by a large proportion of the public, relegated to the rôle of the forgotten man. As shippers approach the railroad problem with their own interests uppermost in their minds, as labor thinks primarily of wages, as different communities demand the service that will suit them best regardless of earning power, so it is only fair that somewhere and in some way there should be study of railroads conducted at the behest of their owners, that great number of men and women who directly own stocks and bonds, and that greater number who are indirect owners through the medium of insurance companies, savings banks and other institutions.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

THE STATE OF CHICAGO. The 49th state of this great American republic. How the world does move (now and then). Once that idea was a bluff or a joke. But Prof. Charles E. Merriam of the University of Chicago proposes Chicago as a state as a way out of many of our troubles. But if Chicago, which means all of Cook county, becomes a state, then what is going to be the state university, Northwestern, the University of Chicago, or the recently reorganized School of Brewing? There is much to be said in favor of each one. Personally, we favor the School of Brewing. Graduates of that institution will be most urgently needed when and if the sacred 18th is repealed. The School of Brewing is already a going concern and all it lacks to become a great state university is a college yell and a football team. These things can be easily secured from a mail order house or a chain drug store, and then we'd be all set and ready to go.

ANOTHER POET BUSTS FORTH IN INDIANA.

(Being a poem called "Our Departed Chief," the same being the inspiration and composition of Wilber F. Murkle, Tiller Man, Hook and Ladder No. 2, Evanston, Ind.)

Toll for the brave! Beshroud our homes
In every conceivable manner!
Let people mourn the fire chief
Of Evanston, Indiana.
He was a noble-hearted man
And a leader in the community,
And many dangerous burning houses
He entered with impunity.
Our Frank is gone, whom once we loved;
A man always up to the minute;
He built the Fire House on Maple Street
And put two automobile engines in it,—
At least if he didn't exactly build it,
He worked like a bee in a hive
Collecting cash for the building fund
As Chairman of the Drive.
He lived in Evanston since 1893,
Becoming ever famous and glorier,
And he made the Fire Department what it is
Since he moved here from Emporia.
The Elks and Kiwanis all send their regards
To his widow, for whom life grows seamier
Since Frank grew sick and passed away
Suffering from pernicious anemia.
Then toll for the brave! Beshroud our homes!
Let the sounding drums be muted,
For than Frank was no fireman more well liked
Or in Evanston better reputed.

SOMEBODY IN NEW YORK has invented a Nicholas Murray Butler cocktail. Why, if people are inventing cocktails again, it is certainly a hopeful sign. In the old days inventing cocktails was one of the principal indoor sports. Everybody invented a cocktail of his own. Most of them were truly awful. Now and then one would be produced that was nothing less than a masterpiece. And so they're at it again. Well, well, we're getting on.

OFFICIALS of a harvester manufacturing company were reported yesterday to be putting employés back on the job because they declare the return of beer will make a big market for the farmers' grain. And again we are wondering if those prohibition orators were spoofing us when they told us that beer was made from widows' and orphans' tears, and broken hearts, and ruined ambitions and mortgaged homes. Anyhow, the harvester people say that beer is made from the farmers' grain. There's something wrong here. We've got to look into this.

LONELY.

It wasn't I who wandered . . . I was here
Long after you had heard a bugle play,
And gone to heed the challenge that came calling,
I stayed behind . . . and let you go away.

Somewhere you know the old lamps light my windows
In case you come . . . and in the fire-bright room
I sit recalling other, gayer twilights—
I hope you come before the lilac blooms.

For if the winter sees you still far-questing,
Not any spring will draw you back, I know.
Oh, is it wrong to pray that brave drums falter,
And banners trail? I miss you, miss you so!

THE BEST MILK FOR CHILDREN.

CHILDREN given pasteurized milk are safer from communicable diseases and, at the same time, they grow equally well as compared with those who drink the raw product.

Over a year ago two pieces of research work, one from America and the other from England, received much notice. These showed that rats fed on cooked milk did not grow as fast as those fed on raw milk.

Milk dealers selling raw milk gave these reports the widest possible publicity, hoping to create enough public sentiment to save the expense of improving their milk plants. The propaganda work was pushed so thoroughly that it came to the attention of the United States public health service, which undertook to investigate the subject.

It selected forty American cities in its field of operation. The health, size, weight, rate of growth, physical development, and freedom from communicable diseases of 3,600 children were investigated. One-half of these drank raw milk. The other half drank pasteurized milk, and had done so for months or years—that is, during all the period that had any bearing on this question. The two groups were, practically speaking, on a par as to race distribution, age, location, financial status, and home influences. All foods other than milk, as well as that food, were also investigated.

The conclusion was that the children fed on cooked milk grew as fast, kept as fit and were as healthy as those fed on raw milk.

The report takes the heart out of the selling campaign. The final conclusion is that the American child from ten months to six years of age does not need raw milk for his health's sake. If there be any difference in food value in favor of raw milk, as the rat experiments seemed to show, the deficiency is met by the mixed diet which children of those ages always take.

A study of the foods eaten by the children in the two groups showed that they ate about the same things and in about the same amounts. The foods reported on were grouped into cereals, fruits, vegetables, fresh meats, eggs, potatoes, candies, and sirups.

There was a difference in cod liver oil. The children fed cooked milk took larger quantities of this oil. On the other hand, the indications were that cooked milk was safer than raw.

The diphtheria rate of the cooked milk group was 17; of the raw milk 22. The rates for scarlet fever were 23 for the cooked milk group and 41 for the raw. In the diarrheas of infancy, including those types that milk might cause, the cooked milk group had a rate of 111 and the other of 196. There were 3 cases of typhoid in each group. The rickets rates were: Cooked milk group, 31; raw group, 51. There were 2 cases of scurvy in the cooked milk group and 1 in the other.

ROUGHAGE FOODS.

F. P. B. writes: To get the body into condition to absorb nutriment the intestines should be cleansed daily, not with drugs but with a large serving of a single bulky type of food, of alkaline or neutral reaction, like bran, apples, oranges, or grapes, between meals or before retiring. In the beginning use as much as two teacupfuls of bran flakes, two to four apples or oranges, a pound of grapes. At mealtime skinny folks may eat anything they please, as much as they please. If laxatives are needed they should use the gentler ones, such as the oil compounds now available. Seeking a return of health in the open spaces, retrieving apples that fell from the trucks as they chanced to journey down some hill on the route to market, I made this discovery. The single item of bulky nature daily in large measures, unmixed with other foods, proved the solution of my weight problem and others should find it helpful. Incidentally, that explains why most overweights get heavier when they try to reduce.

HONEY MAY BE HARMFUL.

J. F. writes: Is honey harmful to one with diabetes?

REPLY:

Most of those who know say it is. A few disagree with the others. The sugar of honey differs somewhat from those used under the name sugar. If you have diabetes do not use honey unless directed to do so by your physician, who will be watching its effect on your blood sugar.

INSURANCE PREMIUM.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I recently received a notice from an insurance company that my automobile policy was canceled for nonpayment of premium. I immediately called the company explaining that I held a receipt showing payment in full to the broker who delivered the policy to me. However, they advised me that the broker did not turn the money over to the company, and as he was a general broker and not an agent of the company as defined by the Illinois brokers qualification law, they were not liable. Have I any recourse against the company? Is the broker considered the agent of the assured? Would the insurance company be liable in case of an accident?

A. M. J.

Presumably they are referring to the 1931 statutes requiring that insurance agents and brokers be separately licensed. We do not see that this has anything to do with the question between you and the company as to whether the company had authorized the broker to collect on their behalf or had held him out as having such authority. The question is one of fact.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

NOVEMBER 19, 1916.

SANTA MONICA, Cal.—Four persons were killed and three badly injured during the running of the Grand Prix automobile race today when a car driven by Lewis Jackson left the course and crashed into the crowd. Jackson himself was killed. The others killed were Harold Edgerton of Los Angeles, a spectator; J. B. Jenkins, a motion picture camera man, and Mrs. Leana Juratch of Venice, Cal. John Ghianda, Jackson's mechanician, had a remarkable escape. He was thrown clear of the wreckage, landed on his feet, and was only slightly injured.

CHICAGO. — "Sonny" Matthews' body was found in the lake off 39th street yesterday. So closed the search for the 9 year old boy who was lost on Feb. 10 and for whom a continent has been combed in behalf of the heartbroken parents. Gypsy bands, mysterious letters demanding ransom, kidnaping clews, and every influence that might have had to do with his disappearance have been investigated with tireless patience for nearly a year. Yesterday a former playmate of the lost boy was walking along the sand off 39th street. A body came into view. The young venturer took one look and ran screaming. "It's 'Sonny' Matthews," he cried. "I know him."

LONDON. — The British yesterday made important advances both north and south of the Ancre river on the Somme front. Their gains, together with those earlier in the week, brought them to the outskirts of Grandecourt, only a few miles from Bapaume.

PETROGRAD.—Russian troops near Srany, southeast of Pinsk, have brought down a large Zeppelin airship. The crew of sixteen was captured. Attacks by Austro-German forces on Russian positions in the Carpathians gained temporary success, but subsequently the Russians drove back their opponents, it was announced.

LONDON.—London regards the fall of Monastir as imminent. Serbian, French, and Russian troops have the city almost enveloped. Its inner fortifications are within range of the allies' guns, and some are reported captured. French troops have reached Kavena, five miles from Monastir.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"A possible preliminary to an evacuation of Belgium" is the interpretation of army officers tonight on the reported German plan to deport 300,000 Belgian civilians to points behind the German lines. Officers recalled that the Russian military authorities took a similar step when, after their drive into East Prussia at the beginning of the war, they found themselves forced to retreat into Poland. Before the withdrawal was begun thousands of German civilians were sent to the interior of Russia, where they are now interned. The practice of deporting native civilians of an occupied enemy territory before evacuation is a common one, it was said. It is done to prevent the civilians from independently harassing the retreating army and from aiding the pursuing enemy.

FROM A DRY.

Moline, Ill., Nov. 16.—The manner in which the wets are now starting off is a good indication that they have learned nothing and that the eighteenth amendment still offers the only solution of the liquor problem.

Any who believe that wet leadership would insure proper control of the liquor traffic if the eighteenth amendment is repealed are invited to note the statements of the mayor of Chicago, the governor of California, the governor elect of Michigan, and others who are said to have announced their intention of disregarding the constitution and the orderly processes of government by granting immunity for future and amnesty for past violations of the laws of the nation.

The drys have long been lulled into a false sense of security, believing that the fight for temperance was over when national prohibition was incorporated in the constitution. The fallacy of this belief is now strikingly apparent. Never before have the wets been more aggressive in their efforts to destroy all legal restraint against booze.

It is now up to the drys throughout the nation to carry on the fight more vigorously than ever before to preserve national temperance and keep the eighteenth amendment in the constitution. LESTER E. FROST.

THE EVILS OF BILINGUALISM.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—F. W. P.'s argument in yesterday's TRIBUNE for official recognition of French in the United States is hardly to be taken seriously. Canada, with its unassimilable French-Canadian element, is a striking example of the evils of bilingualism. In Quebec there is perhaps some justice in making both French and English official languages, since the French were there before the British. However, the mistaken generosity of the treaty of 1763 has caused serious political complications and perhaps hindered the development of the picturesque but medieval minded province of Quebec.

The United States was settled mostly by English speaking people and English has been the official language for a century and a half. The conditions in Quebec do not apply in New England. French-Canadians entering the United States are entitled to no privileges denied those coming from other countries.

A good citizen is willing to adopt the language and customs of the country of his adoption, and Secretary Doak's demand that applicants for citizenship speak the official language imposes no injustice. C. T. FISH.

THE MILKMAN'S LOT.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—The union milkman's weekly salary is $45. Out of this he must make a $2 per week contribution toward the fund for the unemployed members and $6 per month for union dues. And that's not the half of it.

He must pay for all bad checks given him in payment for bills and he must pay for all delinquent accounts he allows to run out of sympathy for the poor unfortunates who cannot pay as promptly as they would like to. If he works for the big corporations he must participate in their almost weekly drives for the sale of butter, eggs, and cheese. His wagon is loaded with anywhere from 50 to 100 packages at the start of the week and he must go out and dispose of these. The products of these corporations are frequently higher in price than those of the average tea store. He dare not bring them back to the office, for after several failures it would mean the loss of his job, and so he either undersells the commodities or takes them home to his wife, paying the difference or whole price out of that glamorous weekly salary of his. Consequently there are many milkmen paying in from their weekly wages anywhere from $10 to $20 per week for butter, eggs, and cheese only.

His job is not an easy one. His wife waits with anxiety every day wondering if he was not held up and hurt or killed if some wild motorist returning from an all-night spree did not crash into his wagon in the early hours of the day, and, last and most important, if he still has his job at the end of the day.

THE ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 10. — With conditions as they now exist since the election, don't you think it would be a good thing to start agitation immediately for ratification of the St. Lawrence waterway by the senate during the December session of congress while we will have the aid of President Hoover to help put it over promptly?

I have been very closely in touch with this waterway proposition from the beginning, and I believe that if a forceful agitation was started immediately through the middle west states that will be benfited by this deep waterway, and delegations sent to Washington as soon as congress convenes for the sole purpose of getting quick action, this ratification of the treaty can be put over in the senate in December very promptly.

2 PROBATIONARY THIEVES GET 99 YRS. FOR MURDER

Judge Sentences Pair for Holdup Killing.

CRIMINAL COURT.

George Washington, assault and battery, sentenced to 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary; Charles R. Wheat, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in the penitentiary; Mike Wojcik, rape, sentenced to 7 to 14 years in the penitentiary; Peter Balchilus and Francis Crotty, murder, sentenced to 99 years each in the penitentiary and 1 to 14 years each for assault to murder; Charles Volk and William Bell, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years each in the penitentiary by Judge Philip L. Sullivan.

Luther Hines, robbery under the habitual criminal act, sentenced to life in the penitentiary by Judge Michael Feinberg.

Frank Weber, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary; Vionili Condole and James Franks, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 10 years each in Pontiac reformatory; Irving Tavlas, Louis Yost, and Michael Riordan, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years each in the penitentiary by Judge John Prystalski.

Francis Crotty, 20 years old, and Peter Balchiulius, 21 years old, both convicted automobile thieves on probation, were sentenced to 99 years in the penitentiary yesterday by Judge Philip L. Sullivan for the murder of Ernest Krampert, who was shot to death on Sept. 13 during the robbery of his butcher shop at 9955 South Halsted street. They were also given terms of one to 14 years each for assault to kill Edward Kirsch, a butcher, who was wounded during the robbery.

Crotty and Balchiulius pleaded guilty to both charges and the sentences were made to run consecutively by Judge Sullivan. Statements made to the court by Assistant State's Attorneys Harry S. Ditchburne and Leonard Sieiger disclosed that leniency shown the defendants on automobile charges had cost the life of Krampert.

Probation on Auto Charges.

Crotty was convicted of stealing an automobile on April 30, 1929, and placed on probation by Judge Ehler. Balchiulius was arraigned before Judge Walter T. Stanton for the theft of two automobiles on May 31, 1932, and given a year's probation on one charge and second charge dismissed. Had both been sentenced they would have been in the penitentiary at the time of the murder, it was pointed out.

The state charged that the defendants entered the butcher shop and forced Krampert to raise his hands. Kirsch entered carrying a tray of meat while the robbery was in progress. Ordered to raise his hands, he hesitated and was shot by Crotty. The bullet passed through Kirsch's body and killed Krampert, who stood behind his assistant with his hands in the air.

Responsibility of Court.

"This is a tremendous responsibility to place on the court, Judge Sullivan said in sentencing the men. "I must either take the life of the defendants or segregate them in a penal institution for the rest of their natural lives. Despite the cold-blooded nature of this murder, there is a difference when the defendant throws himself on the mercy of the court instead of attempting to beat the law by fooling a jury.

"After all, swift and immediate punishment is the only deterrent to crime. I have seen cases where defendants, sentenced by the electric chair, have through technicalities delayed the execution for several years. Some defendants, so sentenced, are walking the streets today. I believe that when a man pleads guilty and helps create a lesson for others that he is entitled to some consideration."

Court attaches pointed out that a defendant might win his freedom after 20 years under a life sentence. Under a sentence of 99 years, the prisoners must serve a minimum of 33 years.

ASSAILS GROWTH OF MEDICAL CARE UNDER CONTRACT

Dr. E. H. Cary Protests U. S. Competition.

Dr. E. H. Cary of Dallas, president of the American Medical association, decried the present tendency toward the contract practice of medicine at the annual conference of secretaries of state medical associations in the Palmer house yesterday. The best medical care has never been achieved under any such system, governmental or otherwise, he said.

DR. E. H. CARY.

"Health insurance contracts made by hospitals, insuring the people of care in case of illness, have grown from offering medical care alone to a combination of hospital and medical service which will undoubtedly involve the medical profession in harmful and undermined practices," Dr. Cary said.

"The medical profession sees ahead and is deeply interested in preventing any system from being adopted which threatens the steady advancement of scientific knowledge and progressive development in the art of healing.

"Unfortunately medical men themselves generally are not aware that experience shows that in all countries in which medical practice has become subservient to extraneous control, progressive scientific medicine and the best medical care are utterly incompatible."

Assails 'Vets' Hospitals.

Dr. Cary mentioned proposals to have the people budget their medical needs. Such a plan might be operated by "county societies with a membership sufficiently unified to put it into practice," he said. Dr. Cary also condemned the government's practice of allowing former service men who cannot trace their illness to war service to be treated in government hospitals.

"As I see it, our professional welfare is definitely dependent on the future attitude of the government" he said. "With us it involves the progress or decline of the science of medicine, and the remote likelihood of the state itself assuming all responsibility for the medical care of the people. If the government persists in this plan individualism in medicine will be greatly hampered and a multitude of evils, which can be easily understood, will follow in its wake."

WOMEN VISION HOMES OF EVEN HEAT, DUSTLESS

Hear James Keeley Tell of Air Conditioning.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

A group of clubwomen left the Woman's City club, 6 North Michigan avenue, yesterday, confident that a Utopia is near at hand for the housewife which women for centuries have dreamed about—a household whose climate is always temperate, where noise does not penetrate from without, and where the daily dusteloth may be regarded practically as an antiquated tool of feminine drudgery.

Such was the new hope for the housewife offered by James Keeley, vice president of the Pullman company, in an address at a club luncheon, in which he described the experimental development of air conditioning.

He predicted that with the utilization of a certain gas all rail equipment can be air conditioned, and that this achievement will ultimately be extended to the home and office, benefiting health and reducing wear and tear on the nerves through the elimination of dirt, noise, and the control of temperature.

Two Vile Gases Do It.

"Instead of workshops for housewives, homes will become homes," Mr. Keeley said. "This will be brought about through a gas called dichlorodifluoromethane, or, for less tongue twisting purposes, F-12. It was discovered unwittingly by a Belgian several years ago when he combined two vile smelling gases so that the result would be odorless and cooling. It was regarded as an unimportant physical phenomenon. Meanwhile the science of air conditioning was progressing rapidly. The chemist's paper fell into the hands of General Motors research chemists, suggesting a new and harmless refrigerating agent, and so it proved. The gas is not poisonous, will not explode, is odorless, noncorrosive, and will extinguish a flame.

"At present there are 119 Pullman cars serving 43 terminals equipped with various types of air-conditioning apparatus, and a recent estimate is that 300 cars of all classifications are now in operation. Air conditioning of railroad equipment is based on the simple proposition that if cars should be heated in winter, equally should they be cooled in periods of oppressive heat. This reasoning, in my judgment, will in the future be applied to homes where the mechanical and operating obstacles are distinctly less than cars in transit."

Tells of Testing Cleanliness.

Mr. Keeley described a trial run of cars from Chicago to Kansas City last summer to demonstrate the absence of noise and dirt. He placed a clean handkerchief on the seat as an experiment, leaving it there until he reached Kansas City.

"There was not one speck of dirt on this handkerchief," he told the women, some of whom shook their heads disbelievingly. "And we could converse across the aisle with voices pitched lower than mine is now. Most of the air-conditioning progress has been made in the last year and a half, but it is still experimental."

The women were made personally acquainted with F-12, during a demonstration following the lecture, by R. J. Thompson, a chemical engineer. He poured the liquid, which is highly volatile, into tumblers, and the women gingerly passed them around, careful not to take hold of the bottom of the receptacle where the temperature was 22 degrees below zero. Then he froze a rose instantly by dipping it into the F-12, took it out and slapped it across his finger, breaking the brittle petals. Its odor and color were not impaired.

Mr. Thompson showed how the fumes of the liquid would extinguish a flame, and, while the horrified women looked on, poured some of it without disastrous results upon the club's dining room rug. Then he poured some of the F-12 in a fruit salad and immediately ate the frozen salad, proving that the liquid is nonpoisonous.

Make Own Cocktail Ice.

"And if you want to make your own ice for cocktails," he added," just pour some of it in a glass of water like this." He shook it around, ice formed, and he drank the water.

Air conditioning of passenger cars, Mr. Keeley explained, is at present divided into three classifications, ice, evaporator and compressor systems. It is the compressor system which utilizes the F-12, he said.

Woman, 75, Charges Fraud in Loss of $19,000 Bonds

Benjamin Whitehurst, 75 years old, 7925 Rhodes avenue, was arrested last night by Lieut. John McGinnis of the detective bureau, following a complaint that he defrauded Mrs. Helen Nelson, 75 years old, 10826 Forest avenue, of real estate bonds valued at $19,000. Whitehurst denied that he had committed any fraud. Mrs. Nelson, he said, turned the bonds over to him under an agreement by which he guaranteed her a monthly allowance, he asserted.

Clemence Dane Sees Union of English Peoples

Author Finds Americans Very Friendly.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

CLEMENCE DANE is this week's distinguished literary visitor. She is lecturing this morning at the Drake hotel on "Drama in Life and on the Stage," and it was looking out of her hotel window there a few days ago that I first saw her, her eyes glowing with excitement over "the sea in the middle of a continent," as she called the lake, which that day did have all of the angry power of the sea. She has the kind of eyes that do glow. Whatever disguise may be effected of the inner nature of man or woman by external manipulation or adjustment, eyes are the blue prints of the human heart.

CLEMENCE DANE.

Clemence Dane's eyes tell you instantly that she is fundamentally a fine human being, a woman whom contacts with life have refined into a person of charm, intelligence, and grace. All of the very nicest qualities of the English woman are compounded in Clemence Dane—and you never could possibly mistake her for anything but British—her looks, her clothes, her manner, as well as her accent.

"But I don't feel the least like a foreigner in America," she said. "The externals, of course, are different—your buildings, your heat [such heat!], your Pullman cars—but, inside, Americans are exactly like Britishers. Perhaps it is your amazing friendliness here, but I have been made to feel perfectly at home. Some day—five hundred years from now, perhaps—I am sure there will be a united empire of all the English speaking peoples."

"United, but probably not empire," I suggested.

I confess to a little bit of hero worship—or heroine worship in her case. Ever since "Regiment of Women" I have known that Clemence Dane is one of the outstanding English novelists. It took "Broome Stages" to convince the great public of that fact, but it has been a fact since 1917. And she is also one of the outstanding English dramatists, besides being a good all-around actress and not a bad painter and all sorts of other things. "A Bill of Divorcement" was her most popular play, the first thing that Katherine Cornell had a great success in.

When I asked Miss Dane what work she had been doing lately or was contemplating doing she said that she had just finished another play for Miss Cornell, "Wild December," and that she is at work on another experiment in the same artistic form which she used for "Adam's Opera" [which had a success in England, but which was never produced here, because, I suspect, it was about Woodrow Wilson]. In "Adam's Opera" she wrote a play in which music, especially composed for it, of course, was an integral part.

She believes that such an art form has more interesting possibilities than the drama without music. It has no relation, of course, to the old opera form or to the modern musical comedy, but is a close and happy marriage between music and drama. The new musidram [that's my concoction of a word, not hers] is to be called "Come of Age."

Like most other novelists some time in their lives, Clemence Dane is on her way to Hollywood to work for a while in the movies. But she has a special reason for going. Her next novel is to be, like "Broome Stages," about the drama, but it is to be contemporaneous, and no novel of the stage these days can disregard the influence which the movies have had and will have on the drama, she says.

"I felt that I must know Hollywood to be able to write intelligently about today's stage, and so I was especially pleased at the opportunity to work there for a few months. As a matter of fact, just a few moments ago I had a telegram settling the details of my contract."

I wish that the contract demanded that she spend six months in Chicago. So would you if you had talked with her. But it is impossible to capture her quality in words, and you'll just have to take my word for it that she's a grand person, so much so that we got very quickly to the point of telling each other our real names. Hers is Winifred Ashton.

Meetings and Lectures

On Tuesday at 6:45 p. m. in Fullerton hall of the Art institute Prof. Fred B. Millett, department of English, University of Chicago, will give his second lecture in the series on modernism in literature, discussing "The Modern Mind in Fiction."

Dr. Louis K. Auspacher will talk on "Modern Drama and Psychology" on Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock at Sinai temple.

History Topics Mark Advance in Child Books

[Director of Children's Work for Branches of the Chicago Public Library.]

"Firecracker Land," by Florence Ayscough. [Houghton-Mifflin.]

"Christopher Columbus," by Edna Potter. [Oxford.]

"Uncle Bill," by Will James. [Scribner.]

"Cowboy Tommy," by Sanford Tousey. [Doubleday-Doran.]

ONE of the evidences of the marked improvement which has characterized young people's books during the last decade has been the number of fine biographical and travel books which have been added to their shelves. Among these may very properly be placed the first two titles on our list today, Florence Ayscough's "Firecracker Land," and Charlotte Brewster Jordan's "Discovering Christopher Columbus." Both are excellent examples of the type of book which young readers themselves are the first to acclaim when it comes into their hands—books which whet the curiosity, broaden the vision, and challenge the thoughts of youth.

The first one is a fascinating account of old China, its culture, its customs and its passing told by one who, although herself not an oriental, has, in the years which she dwelt in China, developed a deep understanding and appreciation of them and their ways. Her own life there, her Chinese friends and servants, her travels over the vast country, the changes which have come and are coming, all of these she pictures for her young readers in a fluent, appealing style, enabling them to see and feel and dream as she herself has done. A book which this writer would place among the "most necessary" for the recreational shelf of the high school reader. The interesting subject, fine presentation and lovely interpretative drawings by Lucille Douglass, all combine to make it indisputably worthy of such a place.

The second title "Discovering Christopher Columbus" may be classed as both biography and travel, for in presenting the character and life of the great explorer the author has done much more than give us the story of the man and his accomplishments. She has instead shown us the man against the background of his times, and in so doing has taken us back into the fifteenth century Spain—a trip which is a valuable one for the young reader who would familiarize himself with the times and forces which wrought the life tragedy of one of the world's greatest benefactors. The book is well written and shows evidence of careful research.

Most young readers will note with interest the possibility of Columbus' having a been a Spanish Jew, a theory which the author shows may be quite a plausible one. It is an inspiring and entertaining account throughout. Edna Potter's "Christopher Columbus" is a simpler account intended for the younger children. It also is well told but deals primarily with the man and does not attempt to present the background in the sense in which the former book does.

The other two titles on our list today are for young lovers of western and cowboy stories.

"The Pastures of Heaven," by John Steinbeck. [Brewer, Warren & Putnam.]

JOHN STEINBECK has had a varied career. Besides being the author of one other novel, he has been a newspaper man, a ranch hand, a carpenter's helper, a painter's apprentice, a chemist, and a laborer. Finally he spent two years as a caretaker of an estate, during which time he was for eight months completely snowed in, with no means of communication with the rest of the world. It was in this period that he wrote the novel "The Pastures of Heaven," which, he says, is a book purged of all hate.

Las Pasturas del Cielo is a valley in California in which many families of widely diverse interests live. Somehow or other, sometimes in a significant way and other times simply trivially, they cross one another's paths, make entrances into and exits from one another's lives. There is the family of the Munroes, who decide to take a house that is considered haunted and that brings bad luck to all its occupants. The Munroes, however, succeed in all their enterprises.

The Wicks have an only daughter who is the most perfectly beautiful and stupid girl in the valley. The father's two passions in life are his protection of his daughter's purity and the creation of an illusion that he is wealthy. Another man has in his charge a boy whose mind had stopped growing when he was five. He has a superb talent for drawing and making things with his hands. Harmless and good, he is finally confined to an asylum for an act that seemed vicious to the authorities.

One family after another enters the story to give up its secrets, its family skeletons, its foibles and finenesses. Thus a rich stream of life flows through the book.

The novel is well plotted, though, perhaps, the conclusion is of a somewhat obvious type. The characters are as vitally real as your next door neighbor, and the style and presentation of the novel are restrained, compassionate, as well as compelling.

FICTION.

Beyond Desire, by Sherwood Anderson [Liveright], is the first work of fiction to come from the author's pen since "Dark Laughter."

NONFICTION.

Education and the Modern World, by Bertrand Russell [Norton], describes the function of education in the lives of adults, social and individual groups.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Memoirs of the Comte de Tilly, with an introduction by Havelock Ellis [Farrar & Rinehart], is a vivid account of the life of one of the most fascinating rakes the 18th century produced.

Reading and Writing and Remembering, by E. V. Lucas [Harpers], are recollections of a rich life, experiences, contacts and endeavors.

POETRY.

The Best Poems of 1932, selected by Thomas Moult [Harcourt-Brace], chooses from magazines the year's poems that seem most lasting and interesting.

Taps, compiled by Theodore Roosevelt Jr. and Grantland Rice [Doubleday-Doran], collects the famous as well as the obscure poems that flowered from the world war.

BOOK DISPLAYS FOR CHILDREN

The week ending today is the fourteenth annual children's book week in America. The slogan of the week this year has been "Young America's Book Parade" and in the week's celebration all over the country the emphasis has been placed on the history of America's progress.

There are book displays all over the city in honor of Louisa May Alcott's centennial anniversary on Nov. 29. The displays feature her many and delightful stories for young people.

Other children's book displays in bookstores and libraries feature children's histories of the United States and stories of America's early building and progress, including material on the Indian.

A New World Is Pictured in British Novel

"Tomorrow's Yesterday" Story of Great Power.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

A VERY curious, powerful and interesting novel is awaited in London. It is like nothing I have previously read and the publishers, with reason, are most enthusiastic about its quality. This book is a first novel by John Gloag and is called "Tomorrow's Yesterday!" Although it is the author's first work of fiction, Mr. Gloag is not a beginner in authorship, and as his former work has dealt with modern architecture one of the facets of "Tomorrow's Yesterday" is illuminted by that fact.

The book is about the problems of civilization, but its immediate concern is with a wonderful new picture house, its advertising promotion and the first talkie exhibited at the house. We begin with the promotion; we are then shown the first picture [a good part of the book consists of its scenario], and we see the effect of this picture on the audience and, not too subtly, are shown how the lesson of the picture is to be enforced by a new world war of which the mutterings are heard as the novel closes.

The book is very brief and very expert. The architecture of the building is described with precision, the advertising experts are transfixed before our eyes and the talkie shows the working of a vigorous, critical mind, capable of imagining the future of civilization [its ruin and rebuilding] an1 keenly interested in several aspects of contemporary life.

The weakest feature of "Tomorrow's Yesterday" is its more human side. Here the author, although skillful and although possessing knowledge, does not succeed in arousing sympathy for the two or three leading characters. There is a little too much of the blueprint about this book. Its power, however, and its sincerity and skill will cause it to be much talked of.

Ogden Nash's verses are just appearing in England for the first time in a collection to which the title "Hard Lines" has been given. This book is likely to have a hard fight until the really appreciative readers have an opportunity of expressing themselves, but I am hopeful that by Christmas it will be known in many hundreds of homes.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

DISCLOSE CHIEF BENEFICIARIES OF TRACTION FEES

$2,746,590 Paid Lawyers and Engineers.

Attorneys and engineers have been the chief beneficiaries of city expenditures from the traction fund, records in City Controller Szymczak's office disclosed yesterday. From 1911 to Nov. 10, 1932, the lawyers and engineers have drawn a total of $2,746,590 from the fund for legal services and for the preparation of subway plans and transportation ordinances.

In the same period city expenditures on transit matters totaled more than $4,124,537. Of this amount $3,475,548 was paid out of the traction fund and the remainder out of the city's corporate fund. It has been a policy in recent years, according to city officials, not to pay for transit litigation out of the traction fund, although some of this expense has been from that fund.

Plan to Halt Expenditures.

Steps may be taken soon, however, to halt further expenditures until the city is actually ready to build the State street subway. Mayor Cermak, on his return from French Lick, is scheduled to confer with city attorneys about the advisability of continuing the special assessment proceedings in the subway case. Several aldermen have announced their intention of pruning traction appropriations in the 1933 budget unless guaranteed that actual subway construction will be started within a year.

The expenditures out of the traction fund by years, and the amounts that were paid for legal, engineering, and all other services are as follows:

Year—	Legal.	Engineering.	Total.
1911	$	$ 24,642	$ 24,642
1912		66,201	66,201
1913		51,418	51,418
1914		2,450	2,450
1915	*
1916	2,062	74,302	203,482
1917	12,490	50,000	76,320
1918	14,764		14,764
1919	12,427	10,000	22,331
1920	93,762	72,144	181,221
1921	34,791	4,035	43,972
1922	51,438	5,449	97,790
1923	38,983	39,106	76,863
1924	25,891	32,741	74,854
1925	30,287	37,867	169,313
1926		59,382	69,122
1927	7,700	61,872	79,165
1928	46,685	77,563	153,195
1929	101,345	74,367	190,748
1930	135,427	383,867	878,971
1931	194,912	732,674	1,988,607
1932 [to Nov. 10]	48,920	163,575	176,409
Totals	$729,132	$2,017,453	$3,475,548

Other expenses not itemized for the period from 1911 to Nov. 10, 1932 amounted to $728,955.

Eight attorneys were paid a total of $430,703 out of the traction fund in periods of two to seven years. Their names and the amounts paid to each are: Walter L. Fisher, $107,925; Allen T. Gilbert, $62,422; George A. Mason, $58,272; William H. Sexton, $54,679; John G. Drennan, $50,974; Joseph J Sullivan, $37,800; Edward C. Higgins, $31,972, and Chester E. Cleveland, $27,467.

Other Payments to Cleveland.

Attorney Fisher was paid over a period of seven years. Although Chester E. Cleveland is credited with receiving only $27,467 from the traction fund, a controller's report of 1929 showed that he was paid a total of $125,546 for work on transit matters the remainder from other city funds.

The lawyers who were paid $125,427 in 1930 and the amouts that each received are:

Attorney—	Amount.
Walter L. Fisher	$25,004
John G. Drennan	18,587
Edward C. Higgins	19,478
Frank R. Reid	4,200
Harry P. Beam	4,100
Allen T. Gilbert	12,105
Sidney S. Gorham	4,200
Joseph J. Sullivan	29,300
Martin A. Walsh	1,650
George A. Mason	15,125

The Adams, Beatty & Francois corporation, industrial engineers, is shown to have received only $10,000 from the traction fund, although the controller's records disclose it was paid $240,246 from other city funds for transit services.

Traction Valuation.

The corporation was employed in 1919 and 1920, under a former Republican mayor, to make a valuation of the surface and elevated lines. It was later charged with having juggled books and padded pay rolls to defraud the city of more than $100,000. This former mayor also set up a transportation commission that spent large sums of traction fund money.

Since 1922 Maj. R. F. Kelker Jr. has been prominent among the city's transit engineers. For that period the records list the amounts spent for engineering as paid out mostly for the engineers and draftsmen employed under Kelker's direction. He was associated with C. E. De Leuw in the preparation of the consolidated transit ordinance and the subway plans.

WILLIAM J. FAHY, MAIL ROBBER, TO TESTIFY AT TRIAL

The government yesterday obtained a writ of habeas corpus to bring William J. Fahy, a former postal inspector, to Chicago from the Atlanta penitentiary, where he is serving 25 years for participation in the Rondout mail robbery in 1923. Fahy is to serve as a prosecution witness in the trial of Harold [Fat] Watkins for participation in the $388,000 mail robbery at the Dearborn street station in 1921. Watkins was captured recently in Chicago after an eleven year search. Fahy participated in both mail robberies. He served as an investigator in the Dearborn street robbery and was one of the bandit gang in the Rondout robbery. The trial of Watkins will start on Nov. 28 before Federal Judge Charles G. Briggle.

TWO KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

COUPLE KILLED IN DIXMOOR WHEN TRAIN HITS AUTO

Wife Is Unable to Name Husband's Friend.

Joseph L. Carneke of 3512 West 62d place, 35 years old, and an unidentified woman were killed late last night when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by an east bound Grand Trunk passenger train on the Western avenue crossing at 144th street in Dixmoor. The woman was decapitated and at an early hour her head had not been found.

At the home of Carneke early this morning his wife said that she believed he was working and that she did not know who his companion was.

There are no gates or warning signals at the crossing, but a watchman stationed there told the Dixmoor police he had tried to flag the car as it approached.

Policeman Is Killed.

Policeman Ernest F. Djupman, 52 years old, a veteran of twenty-five years' service in the police department, was fatally injured yesterday and four other persons, three of them young girls, were hurt when a pie truck collided with a Shakespeare avenue police patrol at August boulevard and Ashland avenue.

Djupman had lost his home at 3641 North Kimball avenue and his savings of $10,000 through the collapse of a real estate bond company and had just applied for a pension, on which he planned to retire Nov. 28 and live at a summer cottage.

Girl Hitch-Hikers Held.

Djupman was riding in the rear of the patrol with three girls—Helen Gibbs, 16 years old; Elfane Habenish, 17, and her sister, Mary, 15—all of Milwaukee, who were arrested Thursday night when police found them dressed in overalls and caps after hitch-hiking from Milwaukee. The patrol was bound for the women's quarters at the Racine avenue station, where the girls were to be held for their parents.

Policeman Peter Hayes, 54 years old, 6049 Barry avenue, driver of the patrol, suffered only minor injuries. Djupman and the three girls were taken to St. Mary's hospital.

The driver of the pie truck, identified as Chester Loss, 19 years old, at the office of the Famous Pie company, could not be found after the accident.

Year's Toll Near 1,000 Mark.

Djupman's death and four others in Cook county yesterday raised the motor toll for the year to 998. The other victims:

Philip Pancoast, 10 years old, 7020 Oleander parkway. Died in the Martha Washington hospital. He was struck last night by an automobile at Lunt avenue and Olander parkway. The driver, Mrs. Ralph Frye, 37 years old, 7011 Olcott avenue, was held.

John M. Laferty, 1237 Washington boulevard. Fatally injured last night by an automobile at 63d street and 73d avenue, Argo.

Paul Weiss, 45 years old, 4829 Patterson avenue. Fatally injured by an automobile at Michigan avenue and Ohio street. Weiss was a foreman of the Curtis Candy company, 337 East Illinois street.

John Krantz, 13 years old, 807 Aurora avenue, Aurora, was fatally injured and his brother, Donald, 9 years old, was critically hurt when an automobile struck the bicycle on which both were riding near their home.

CLEARS SHERIFF OF CHARGES IN BRUMLIK CASE

Sheriff Meyering appeared yesterday before Circuit Judge Philip J. Finnegan and denied that political influence had anything to do with the failure of his deputies to arrest Hugo Brumlik, brother of George Brumlik, city greeter pro tem., on an attachment for nonpayment of alimony.

Attorney Matilda Fenberg, who represented Mrs. Anna Brumlik, who divorced Hugo two years ago, made the charge of political influence. She also asserted that last year, when Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude sentenced Hugo to jail for nonpayment of alimony, the same influence operated to keep him in custody for two weeks in a room in the Hotel Sherman, instead of in a jail cell.

"This fellow's just an artful dodger," Chief Deputy Sheriff Charles W. Peters told Judge Finnegan. "We've had deputies out for almost a year and can't find him."

"I didn't think it was true," said Judge Finnegan.

"But that deputy is the same who took Brumlik to the hotel instead of to jail," objected the attorney.

Put another man on the case," directed Judge Finnegan.

"We'll put a half dozen on it if it keep this lady out of my office," said Mr. Peters, indicating Miss Fenberg.

U. S. Judge to Be Lenient Pending Dry Law Action

LATVIA 14 YEARS OLD; ALL BALTIC STATES JOIN FETE

Sovereign State Hails Independence.

BY DONALD DAY.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

RIGA, Latvia, Nov. 18.—The sovereign Free State of Latvia celebrated its fourteenth birthday today. Parades were held in the principal cities which were illuminated by displays of fireworks tonight.

President Albert Kriesis received the congratulations of the diplomatic corps and later held a reception at Riga castle. Robert P. Skinner, American minister to the Baltic states, and other members of the American legation attended.

Latvia's neighbors—Estonia, Lithuania and Poland—joined in the festivities and celebrations were held in their capitals. The press of all four countries urged political leaders to quit dilly-dallying and hasten negotiations uniting these states in an economic and political union.

The Estonian press bitterly reproached politicians of the two nations, remarking that while Latvia and Estonia fought back to back in stemming the German invaders and the Red army to obtain their independence, the countries today are no closer economically than they were fourteen years ago.

"Although public opinion in both countries forced leaders to sign a defensive agreement, we are still far apart after years of negotiations," one newspaper said.

The Baltic press also is closely following the preliminary survey in connection with the construction of the Dvina river hydroelectric station in Latvia by the Foundation company of New York. This firm already has opened negotiations with Lithuania for a similar project to harness the River Niemen which passes through Kaunas.

ONCE HELD BY RUSSIA.

Latvia, along the southern part of the Baltic littoral, is inhabited chiefly by Letts. As early as the thirteenth century the Letts fought against the Germans, who created a republic consisting of Estonia, Latgale, Livonia, and Courland. This republic lasted until 1560.

Estonia passed under the rule of Sweden and Latgale and Livonia under that of Lithuania-Poland. Courland alone retained her independence. In 1621 Livonia was annexed by Sweden and in 1710 by Russia. In 1772, after the first partition of Poland, Latgale was assigned to Russia and from this time on until 1918 Latvia was under Russian rule.

CLING TO AMERICAN TRADITIONS, IS PLEA OF COL. M'CORMICK

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Col. Robert R. McCormick, Chicago publisher, today urged members of the Chamber of Commerce, in an address, not to discard American traditions for "the doctrines of Moscow and Mussolini."

Col. McCormick, a world war veteran, ascribed the depression to the attempts to capitalize war profits instead of "saving for a rainy day."

"On this illusion," he said, "were based our war expenditures, which are now dragging us down as England's revolutionary confiscations have borne down England."

He described the hunger riots of London as "an insurrection" growing out of false economic practices and class distinctions.

Col. McCormick said politicians have taken refuge in nostrums to hold up the tax rates of this country at a level the nation cannot support.

KENNEDY AIDS 5 ON TRIAL FOR LIGHTING FRAUDS

Michael J. Kennedy, former city commissioner of gas and electricity, testified as a court witness yesterday in the Criminal court of Judge Thomas J. Lynch, in the second trial of Harry Johnson, president of the Electrical Contracting company and four suspended city employés. The defendants are charged with conspiracy to defraud the city by skimping on material in a street lighting contract.

Prosecutor Charles E. Lounsbury insisted that the witness be called by the court because of testimony given by Kennedy that he reacted in favor of the defense at the first trial, which ended in a disagreement by the jury.

Kennedy repeated the testimony today. He said he had given permission for the contracting company to change specifications in return for a promise that the city would be charged no extras for superior material used in other parts of the work.

HERD DOZEN INTO WASHROOM, ROB STORE OF $1,400

Five bandits late yesterday raided the offices of the B. Zeigmund Wholesale Grocery company, 2855 Lincoln avenue, threatened a dozen employés and customers with a shotgun and revolvers and escaped with $1,400. The bandits were believed by police to have robbed the offices of the Apex Motor Fuel company, 1401 West North avenue, earlier in the day of $429.

Three men entered the grocery offices while two others stayed in an automobile near the door. The three bandits forced Miss Suzie Pooler, 22 years old, 1244 Roscoe street, the cashier, to lead them to the cash drawer. All employés and the customers were forced in a washroom where they were also robbed.

The robbery of the fuel company was executed in a similar manner, but only three bandits participated. Miss Elizabeth Harper, 4352 Washington boulevard, cashier, was compelled to turn over $300 in the cash drawer and her purse containing $67. Another employé, R. H. Tompson, was robbed of $62.

SCHOOL DEFICIT MAY GIVE KIDS EXTRA HOLIDAYS

A possibility that the Chicago schools may be closed a week early at Christmas time to make up a deficit in the budget was revealed yesterday by William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools. The saving in salaries from suspending operation of the schools for one day is approximately $200,000, according to the Strayer survey of the school system.

Harry Brackett, school auditor, declared that at the present rate of spending there will be a shortage of more than one million dollars by the end of the year.

A decision on the number of days the schools will be closed will be made after Dec. 1, Mr. Bogan said, after the latest available balance sheet figures have been studied.

ANNIE S. COBURN ESTATE IS GIVEN $888,982 VALUE

Art Collection Appraised at $405,491.

An inventory of the estate of Mrs. Annie Swan Coburn, filed yesterday before N. J. Bonelli, assistant to Probate Judge Horner, by Winston, Strawn & Shaw, attorneys for the executors, placed the present value of the estate at $888,982. Mrs. Swan, widow of Lewis Larned Coburn, patent lawyer and first president of the Union League club, died May 31. In the Blackstone hotel, where she had lived since the death of her husband early in the century.

Mrs. Coburn's notable art collection, the bulk of which she bequeathed to the Art institute, was appraised at $405,491. She also left jewelry valued at $74,913, including a necklace of oriental pearls, and stocks and bonds estimated to be worth $400,000.

Famous Paintings.

Mrs. Coburn's art collection, which she kept in her apartment in the Blackstone hotel until it was placed on exhibition at the Art institute two months before her death, was best known for its 69 French oils and water colors, some of which were internationally famous. Ten of the important paintings are to go to the Fogg museum of Harvard university, the remainder, with the exception of a few gifts to friends, to the Art institute.

The appraisals placed by Benjamin K. Smith on some of the more important paintings follow: Renoir's "On the Terrace," $40,000; his "Lady Sewing," $20,000; his "Sisley," a portrait, $10,000; Cezanne's "Auvers-sur-Oise," $15,000; his "Flowers and Fruit," $10,000; Toulouse-Lautrec's "A Dance at the Moulin de la Galette," $20,000; Degas' "Uncle and Niece," $25,000; his "Millinery Shop," $22,000; Van Gogh's "Soleil du Midi," $15,000; Manet's "The Lange Boy," $20,000; his "Portrait of a Lady," $10,000; his "Le Journal Illustre," $20,000, and Monet's "Beach at Sainte Adresse," $10,000.

Includes Many Oils.

The collection also includes oils by Daumier, Forain, Gauguin, and Picasso, and a number of French water colors. Mrs. Coburn also left fifty of these to the Art institute, a memorial to her mother, Mrs. Olivia Shaler Swan. She left the institute $250,000 for maintenance of and additions to the two collections.

Other bequests were made in the will to Field museum, Hampton institute, Northwestern university, Smith college, and Brainerd Memorial library, Haddam, Conn., as well as to friends and relatives.

CAPONE'S PRISON PALS REGARD HIM AS A "SISSY"

Al Capone, erstwhile Chicago gang chief, is now a shoemaker. This fact and the information that he is a model prisoner—even regarded as something of a "sissy" by other prisoners in the federal penitentiary in Atlanta—were learned yesterday at the federal building.

It was said that Capone is rapidly becoming a master of the shoemaking trade. His ambition to make the prison baseball team he has never realized.

Capone obeys every order and command with alacrity, it was said, and does all he can to earn the ten days a month allowed for good behavior.

FIND LIQUOR SELLER WAS SHOT.

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict at the county morgue that James J. Kenney, bootlegger, whose was shot to death Nov. 3 in the Peacock grill, 5026 Cottage Grove avenue, came to his death at the hands of persons unknown.

ASK IMMEDIATE SALES FOR TAXES TO HALT STRIKE

Immediate entering of judgments and ordering of sale of all tax delinquent properties is urged in a resolution of the joint committee on public school affairs as a means of breaking the tax strike. The resolution was sent yesterday to Mayor Cermak, County Treasurer McDonough and County Attorney Hayden Bell.

The resolution points that over 99 per cent of all 1928, 1929, and 1930 tax objections are adjudicated or controlled by the decisions of the Supreme court and there is no reason for further delay. It asks that all officials unite to secure speedy action in the County court.

A similar resolution calling upon County Judge Jarecki to "render expeditious judgments in accord with the law" was passed by the Federation of Women High School Teachers at the Auditorium hotel last night.

The joint committee has also passed a resolution urging the purchase of school tax anticipation warrants by taxpayers for presentation to the county collector to pay the share of taxes allotted to the board of education. Such purchase, the resolution states, will raise the value of the warrants and tend to relieve hardships of teachers and other school employes.

COURT REJECTS "SON'S" CLAIM TO WENDEL RICHES

New York, Nov. 18.—[Special.]—The claim of Thomas Patrick Morris, Brooklyn house painter, to filial kinship with John G. Wendel and through that rightful ownership of all of the $30,000,000 Wendel estate, was thrown out of court as "false and a forgery" by Surrogate James A. Foley today.

Attorneys fo. Morris and for the estate of Miss Ella Von E. Wendel, the last of the Wendels joined tonight in wondering if the mystery of who prepared and engineered the Morris claim would ever be unraveled. They were agreed that Mo.ris had not been the author of the documents produced by him or in his 1 half in support of his contention.

John M. Harlan, trial counsel for the estate which Miss Ella Wendel left to various charitable institutions, ended the presentation of evidence today by proving that the marriage certificate, purporting to attest the wedding of John G. Wendel and Mary Ellen Devine, at Castle Garden, N. Y., on June 11, 1876, had been printed by the A. J. Holman company of Philadelphia, makers of Bibles, not earlier than 1913 and not later than 1923.

CANTACUZENE IS RECOVERING; NO SERIOUS INJURIES

Prince Michael Cantacuzene, great grandson of President Grant, was recovering yesterday at the Alice Home hospital in Lake Forest from bruises and sprains suffered when his horse fell in jumping a fence at the Onwentsia Country club Thursday. It was said that he had suffered no internal injuries or fractured bones.

Dr. Theodore Proxmire, attending the prince, denied him to all visitors except his wife. The doctor said the prince would be able to leave the hospital in a few days. Prince Cantacuzene said the accident in no way has damped his love of riding and expressed regret that he would be unable to watch the hunter trials at the club today.

Mrs. Heath, Radio Star, Dies at the Age of 69

Douglaston, L. I., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Mrs. Julian Heath, president of the National Housewives' league, whose name and voice are known to thousands of radio listeners in the east and middle west, died tonight of a heart disease after an illness of a few days. She was born in Stonington, Conn., sixty-nine years ago. Mrs. Heath was a widow and lived with her son, Julian D. Heath, a lawyer.

Evelyn Preer, 36, Negro Screen Actress, Is Dead

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Evelyn Preer, 36, Negro stage and screen actress, died at the general hospital after a brief illness. In New York she played under direction of David Belasco and came from there four years ago with the Lafayette players in "Rain."

LAMA TEMPLE AT WORLD'S FAIR TO BE OPENED TODAY

The doors of the Golden Pavilion of Jehol, reproduction of a Chinese Lama temple, at the south end of Soldiers' field, will be thrown open to World's Fair visitors for the first time today. The original temple was built in inner Mongolia by Emperor Ch'ien-lung in the years 1767-'71.

Following its selection by Dr. Sven Hedin, Swedish explorer, financed by Vincent Bendix, a replica was completed at Peiping, China. Eighty artisans worked for several months on the sculpture and paintings, friezes, capitals, windows and doors. Then the material, more than 38,000 pieces, was packed in 173 crates and shipped to Chicago.

A striking feature of the temple is its golden roof, which was reproduced by using more than 25,000 copper shingles covered with gold leaf. The interior of the building contains hundreds of Lama robes and masks, musical instruments, statues of Buddha, prayer wheels, altars, idols and other religious articles. There will be an admission charge of 15 cents.

EX-TELLER ASKS FOR PROBATION IN BANK THEFT CASE

Victor E. Olson, 104 West 112th place, former paying teller of the closed Wiersema State bank, 111th street and Michigan avenue, appeared yesterday in the Criminal court and asked that he be given probation on charges of embezzling $33,000 in funds of patrons of the bank. Chief Justice John Prystalski pointed out that Olson had not yet entered a plea and refused to entertain the request unless all complainants in the case recommended probation.

Eleven of the 13 complainants said they had recovered their losses and were willing that he should be put on probation. Mrs. Anna Olson, an aunt of the defendant, and Miss Bess McCarthy, 23 West 113th street, asked prosecution, saying restitution had not been made in their cases. Judge Prystalski continued the case until Dec. 19 to allow Olson to negotiate with Mrs. Olson and Miss McCarthy.

Prosecutor Henry Ayers, head of State's Attorney Swanson's bank bureau, announced at the hearing that he was going to resign and enter private practice.

SCHOOLS TO AID NEEDY FAMILIES ON THANKSGIVING

More Fortunate Pupils to Give Food to Poor.

Donations of food by more fortunate pupils to the families of the poor will be added this year to the usual programs of plays and pageants as a practical feature of the Thanksgiving celebration of the half a million children in 400 Chicago schools.

MISS SWAIN.

Miss Frances Swain, director of household arts and lunchrooms in the schools, is in charge of distributing baskets of food. High school girls in domestic science classes have been given the problem of determining the articles of food to be included in $2, $4, and $5 baskets of food.

Much to Be Thankful For.

"Despite the evils that have beset us in the present depression," Superintendent of Schools William J. Bogan said yesterday, "all who have health have something to be thankful for. The parents and the 14,000 school teachers may be thankful that the schools are still operating. Underprivileged and poverty stricken children should be thankful that their needs are being cared for by the more fortunate."

Also listed among the Thanksgiving activities in the schools is the collection of money to be turned over to the School Children's Aid society for the purchase of new clothing and new shoes for needy children.

Demands on Fund Double.

The society, an auxiliary of the Chicago Woman's club, maintains headquarters in the Dante Elementary school, 840 South Des Plaines street. Funds are furnished through contributions of school children, donations by others, and by money making enterprises of different school classes. The school principals make requisitions on the society for clothes and supplies for needy children. Approximately $82,832.96 was turned over to the society last year for the aid of 60,000 children. This year the need is twice as great, Mrs. George McCorkle, president, said yesterday.

David Drollett, tenor of the Philadelphia Opera company, who is in Chicago, will give a concert Wednesday as part of the Thanksgiving program at the Lindblom High school, 6130 South Lincoln street.

Faculty Games to Help.

Funds for Thanksgiving for the Hubbard Junior High school, 6200 North Hamlin avenue, and Wright Junior High school will be raised by two basketball games between the faculty basketball teams of the two schools. One game will be played Tuesday in the Wright school and a return contest staged the next night at the Hubbard school.

Chicago's 1,800 crippled school children will be given Thanksgiving dinners Wednesday in the lunchrooms of the Spalding and Peterson schools. A play will be given by pupils of the sixth grade in the Parker Practice school on Wednesday, 160 children in the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium will be given turkey dinners Thursday, and the 300 boys and 35 girls in the Parental school, 3600 Foster avenue, will have turkey and a Thanksgiving celebration. The public schools will close Wednesday for Thanksgiving vacation until Monday morning.

Hanky Buyers Should Go Into Action at Once

Monograms Will Require Three Weeks.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

EARLY-BIRD shoppers with the bright idea of presenting monogrammed hankies at Christmas are hereby warned that it takes three weeks to complete even a simple block letter combination . . . complicated cut-out affairs need a few more days than that, so take one of these crisp days and use it for your initial ordering. The cost of monogramming has taken the great slide to unbelievable reasonableness, along with a lot of other things, so you can really have a grand time this year labeling all your gifts.

The longest letters decorate the corners of all the gay chiffon 'kerchiefs for evening wear . . . and they still are the best buys for any and all evening costumes. Plain bright colors and all the pastel tints are arriving daily . . . huge fine size squares of chiffon that certainly do dress up a dark colored gown.

Flowing script initials are what you will see on the thinnest and sheerest of new daytime hankies, in white, or in color, and for the tailored small precise square-ish type block letters that can be read at a glance.

If you want something very individual, you will shout with glee over the possibility of having a real honest to goodness personal signature, reproduced on a small feminine wisp or the large masculine square. And as an irrefutable proof of ownership, such signed squares for going-to-the-laundry weekly trips are unbeatable.

And even the campus gal would welcome a dozen of these well signed wisps to see her through a hectic term of college life. Small sized replicas of these signed handkerchiefs with the first name of your offspring embroidered thereon would solve an ever present trouble in retrieving those necessary pocket trifles and keeping them in the possession of the rightful owner.

If you are not sold on the idea of initials, look for the new prints . . . gay, breezy things with floral designs running around the best borders. The new dark brown colors that are so dark as to look black are exceptionally distinctive and interesting. Then the prints that look like tweeds are something else to consider, for you can get printed designs that match the scratchy tweeds of your pet sports suit or dress or coat in color and weave.

Sweater collectors who like gayly colored hankies to match can now grab the new zigzags, stripes and knitted patterns that have been copied on the best and newest thin 'kerchiefs, for this very purpose. Wild and quite noisy designs are fluttering everywhere, but the fragile little lace trimmed white "sheers" are romantically different, and especially effective with all the new ruffled frocks with puffed sleeves and old fashioned silhouettes.

Lovely hand blocked printed handkerchiefs, with quaint, old fashioned rose and daisy and hollyhock borders and rococo effects that look suspiciously like flamboyant opera curtains have been made from patterns of a hundred years ago . . . they are so refreshingly old fashioned that you will be reminded of lace and rosebud valentines covered with bowknots and other sentimental extras.

New big squares of chiffon for evening have been unpacked in one shop . . . these pastel tinted beauties have bunches of daisies in many colors exquisitely embroidered in the corners and sprinkled coyly all over the square . . . you can buy them in soft peach tints, old faded blues, canary yellows, tea rose pink and dusty mauves, quite the most feminine and exquisite 'kerchiefs any fastidious shopper can demand, and price tags are as alluring and tempting as the wisps they are pinned on.

Good Morning!

Panics may come and panics may go, but America will march on forever. That's the message and the spirit of "The Conquerors."

It's a timely picture; an episodic and interesting one. The story transports you from 1873—and there was a panic then—to the 1932 depression, and it would assure you that hardy, fighting hearts of 1873, 1896, and 1917 were no whit different from those that beat in this year of our Lord.

How fashionable it has become to carry characters through several generations, permitting the onlooker to watch them age—gracefully or otherwise—by the way! Richard Dix and Ann Harding as young married folks, middle aged lovers and grandparents do a nice job of entertaining the onslaught of the years. Hailing from the east, they go west and put their shoulders to the wheel of building a Nebraska frontier town into a booming city. Mr. Dix deserves a medal for the fine old man he makes. Ann Harding is a most winsome old lady, and that grand and funny Edna May Oliver turns herself into a marvelous, cackling crone. It's an art!

"The Conquerors" is crowded with incident—almost too much so at times. It is, however, also crowded with good acting. It has been excellently photographed, staged and costumed and was, I thought, well directed, considering the mass of material to be utilized.

Higgins Shows His Paintings of Indian Girls

Reveals a New Manner in Present Work.

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

When you have lived among the Indians of the Southwest for twenty-five years and have never betrayed their trust, then they will allow you to use their daughters for models—if you are a painter. Victor Higgins has done just this and the result of it is found in his exhibition of recent paintings which opened yesterday afternoon with an informal tea in the Chester H. Johnson galleries, Fine Arts building.

Mr. Higgins has lived in Taos for so long and painted that gorgeous landscape so often that his name is one of the most familiar of contemporary artists doing the American scene.

These present paintings are different. Mr. Higgins has grown into a new manner and technique that is modern in tone and yet keeps the craft which his earlier training gave him. The figure studies are simple, bold, and uncomplicated essays at combining pattern, color, form, and atmosphere in one canvas.

They lack atmosphere but are convincing in pattern, color, and form. They are tremendously interesting. To orient the Indian models the painter shows a number of landscapes dealing with New Mexico. The modern touch illuminates them all, though the oils seem to wear a veil and it is in the water colors that the country comes alive. The water colors are fascinating, brisk, decorative, and as though on tiptoe.

The exhibit will continue for two weeks.

The seventh annual art exhibition sponsored by the All-Illinois Society of Fine Arts opens tomorrow evening at the Stevens hotel. It promises to be an unusually brilliant show, and will continue to Dec. 20.

Leander McCormick Wedding Rumor Is News to Brother

Palm Springs, Cal., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Alister H. McCormick at his winter home here tonight said he knew nothing of the reported impending marriage of his brother, Leander McCormick, and Mme. Renee Fleuriau of Paris. He said he had never heard of Mme. Fleuriau.

Leander McCormick is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick and lives in London. He was divorced by the former Alice Cudahy in 1929. According to reports the marriage is to be celebrated as soon as Mme. Fleuriau has obtained a divorce. The reports have not been confirmed by any member of the family.

Debut Party of Jane Boyce Is Lovely One

Delightful Affair Held at Fairbank Home.

BY JUDITH CASS.

The tradition of delightful parties in the Kellogg Fairbank residence at 1244 North State street was strengthened and carried on by the debut tea held there yesterday afternoon at which Mrs. Livingston Fairbank, Mr. Fairbank's brother's wife, introduced to society her daughter, Miss Jane Boyce. Mrs. Fairbank, who is more beautiful and younger looking than when she moved to Paris about six years ago, and her tall young daughter received in the library, where an open fire and quantities of flowers added to the cheery and attractive picture.

Miss Boyce was lovely in a pale yellow lace gown with cape effect sleeves bordered in fox of the same shade, and she carried an exquisite bouquet of yellow and brown orchids and valley lilies. Mrs. Fairbank, shorter and darker than her blonde daughter, was stunning in cerise moire with an upstanding collar and a single purple orchid on one shoulder

Debutantes Are Assistants.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank and her daughter, Miss Janet Fairbank, who made her social debut at a dance at the Casino seven or eight years ago and last year made a debut into the professional singing world, assisted in the large living room and dining room, as did a group of this and last year's buds. In the dining room the girls took turns presiding at the tea table, which was beautiful with gleaming silver, lighted candles and mammoth centerpiece of yellow roses. Assisting were the Misses Marjorie Horton, Elizabeth Baum, Kathryn Evans, Lydia Swift, Betty Brawley, Josephine Patterson, Marjorie Goodman, Betty Brown, Mary Senior, Helen Marie Castle, Eleanor Page, and Laura Thorne.

To mention a bathroom in connection with a debut reception would seem to be far-fetched, but I cannot resist mentioning how many people going in and out took occasion to take a peep into the gay one off the coat room downstairs that clever Mrs. Frederick Hauck [Janet Chase] has just finished decorating for her uncle and aunt. It has flamingoes on the walls in every conceivable attitude and at the window hangs brilliant green tarlatan which some one whispered had just been hung yesterday morning in time for the party. Such a gay and colorful place as that little bathroom is!

Familiar Faces Seen.

A few familiar faces this reporter saw during the few minutes she was there were Kellogg Fairbank and the sons of the family, Kellogg Jr. and Benjamin; Miss Helen Bell, Mrs. Dexter Fairbank, the Samuel T. Chases, Miss Libby Chase, the Frederick Hauckes, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Barnes, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. Charles H. Chadwick, Mrs. Gustavus F. Swift and Miss Geraldine Swift, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey B. Blair, Miss Nancy Traylor, Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher M. Durbin, Mrs. Welch Dickinson, Mrs. Moisant Griffiths and Miss Gloria Griffiths, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Taylor, Mrs. Mitchell D. Follansbee, and Miss Boyce's paternal grandmother, Mrs. William D. Boyce of Dixon, Ill.

Mrs. Fairbank is entertaining a group of the debutantes and their escorts at the regular Saturday night dinner dance at the Saddle and Cycle club tonight for her daughter, and on Dec. 22 Mr. and Mrs. Laird Bell are giving a dance at the Casino for their debutante daughter, Frances, and their debutante nieces, Jane Boyce and Lucy Fairbank. Miss Bell is at Smith college and Miss Fairbank is at Bryn Mawr, which explains why they were not present at Miss Boyce's tea yesterday. Miss Boyce was an assistant at their joint debut party in Winnetka early in the season.

Garbo Uses Usual Disguise to Visit Paris Night Club

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Nov. 18.—Wearing her favorite disguise, that of a country schoolmarm, Greta Garbo tonight went exploring the Montmarte and bumped into at least one place where a good schoolmarm should never go.

The night club Greta chose was one of the most lurid in the Montmartre, one frequented by hardboiled ladies of the Paris demi-monde who go there attired in mannish costumes to give lady tourists the shock they are looking for by asking them to dance.

Greta was accompanied by her friend, the Countess Wachtmeister, and an unidentified man escort. She remained at the table chatting and talking with her boy friend and refused the requests of the girls of the establishment to dance.

House Banked with 30,000 Flowers at Display for Charity

St. Chrysostom's parish house, 1424 Dearborn parkway, yesterday was banked with 30,000 roses. The display was in connection with a rose show and sale conducted by the St. Frances guild for the benefit of St. Mary's Home for Children. Among the younger women selling flowers were Marguerite Foster, Julia Kramer, Dorothy Schmidt, Betty Brawley, Margaret Sinclair, Mrs. Nathaniel Owings, and Mrs. John Jay Finlay.

Patronesses for the show were Mrs. Joseph E. Otis, Mrs. Bruce Borland, Mrs. Le Roy Kramer, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. Franklin R. Miller, Mrs. Bruce Willis Strong, Mrs. Charles P. Anderson, and Mrs. George Craig Stewart.

Tooth Marked Pen of Lincoln Shown in City

Articles in Chicago for First Time.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

Herbert Hoover never cast about more nervously in untangling the problems of a debt moratorium than Abraham Lincoln did when he signed the document that set the Negro free.

This was the contention yesterday of Mrs. Stewart Pritchard of Battle Creek, Mich., granddaughter of Judge and Mrs. James H. Bradwell, as she pointed with a degree of personal pride to the heavy molar indentations in the end of the black and gold pen used by President Lincoln to sign the Emancipation Proclamation.

Mrs. Pitchard, a guest yesterday of the Hobby Collectors' Antiques exposition now in session at the Hotel Sherman, has brought to Chicago for the first time her collection of Lincolniana, one of the finest private collections of its kind in the United States. Today the famous relics—jewelry, documents and desk appointments—will be removed to the new home of the Chicago Historical society in Lincoln park for an indefinite showing.

"At least eight other pens have been claimed to be Lincoln's. In fact, one was sold a year ago for $1,500," explained Mrs. Eleanor Gridley, president of the Abraham Lincoln Log Cabin association, who attended the hobbies exposition yesterday with Mrs. Pritchard. "But I have the affidavit to prove that Mrs. Pritchard's is the original."

The pen was the inaugural gift of Senator Charles Sumner to Mr. Lincoln. On the slender gold band is the inscription, "To the President, Abraham Lincoln, March 4, 1861." With the other Lincolniana, it was inherited by Mrs. Pritchard from her grandparents, the Bradwells.

The story is that Mrs. Lincoln gave the pen and her gold mesh bracelet worn at the inaugural ball of 1861 to Mrs. Bradwell after the assassination of President Lincoln as "a meager expression of her appreciation and gratitude to her loyal friend." Mrs. Bradwell, it is related, was instrumental in obtaining the release of Mrs. Lincoln from the Bellevue Place sanatorium in Batavia in 1876.

The extensive correspondence carried on between Mrs. Lincoln and Judge and Mrs. Bradwell while Mrs. Lincoln was in the sanatorium is well known, although nothing except its tradition has been left to later generations.

The gold bracelet, a birthday present to Mrs. Lincoln from her husband, is in the collection Mrs. Pritchard has brought to Chicago.

Louis Eckstein Elected to New York Opera Board

New York, Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Louis Eckstein, Chicago business man who fostered the Ravinia Opera company and paid out approximately $1,000,000 in deficits in the course of twenty years, has become a director of the Metropolitan Opera company of New York, according to announcement made here today. Mr. Eckstein is a close friend of Otto H. Kahn, who, until a few months ago, was chairman of the board of the Metropolitan Opera company.

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

Copyright, 1932, By News Syndicate Co., Inc.

Dr. Fordney is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem has been taken from his casebook covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

Try your wits on it! It takes but ONE MINUTE to read. Every fact and every clew necessary to its solution are in the story itself—and there is only one answer. How good a detective are you?

CLASS DAY.

"Last night I was reminded of an interesting and amusing incident," remarked Prof. Fordney to his class.

"Some time after Vidocq, famous ex-criminal, was made chief of the Parisian police, he needed additional recruits for his force. A group of notorious ——— were brought to him and while HE had faith in their avowed reformation and needed their craft, cunning and guile in tracking down law breakers, nevertheless M. Vidocq was a practical man.

"He believed implicitly that while it 'took a thief to catch a thief,' some restraint should be placed on the thief catcher.

"Pondering the matter, a brilliant thought solved the problem of adding these ex-criminals to his force while protecting the public from their ——— proclivities, should temptation prove too strong for them.

"He instructed Lieut. Douchet to outfit the ex——— in blue uniforms with white gloves and spats, tri-corn hats of black and elbow length capes lined with white. When this was done he called them together.

"'Well, mes enfants! You are truly magnifique! I, the great Vidocq, say it.' Ah, but the flesh she is weak! And so, my pretty ones, if you are EVER caught without the complete, beautiful uniforms I have provided, you will be discharged . . . tout de suite! You understand what I mean? Yes? Bien. You can now be good gendarmes and me . . . I can sleep untroubled by dreams of outraged citizens demanding I remove from my force you ———.'

"Now," smiled the professor, "tell me what kind of ex-criminals they were. If you know that, you'll appreciate Vidocq's strategy."

WHAT WERE THEY?

The above was sent to the professor by Mrs. C. W. Cargo of Chicago for a class day problem.

Perhaps you have one you would like him to submit to his class. If so, send it to Prof. Fordney in care of this paper and he will be delighted to see what his students make of it.

[See solution on page 29.]

Harpo Marx Just Crazy to Act on Moscow Stage

Hollywood, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Harpo Marx, comedian, said today he is "crazy to go" to Moscow and appear on the stage. His statement was in response to news from Moscow that he is to be invited there for a stage appearance early next spring. Marx said he had not received the cablegram of invitation which A. M. Dankman, soviet director of music halls and circuses, reported he was sending today.

Miss Anne Schuttler Engaged to Norris Love of Riverside

Young Couple Plan Spring Wedding; Onwentsia Hunt Club Trials Will Be Held Today.

BY JUDITH CASS.

ANOTHER interesting engagement with plans for a spring wedding is being announced this morning by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schuttler of 2355 Commonwealth avenue and Wheaton. Their elder daughter, Anne, is engaged to Norris Love, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin M. Love of Riverside. Miss Schuttler finished at Miss Wheeler's school at Providence and then spent a year and a half abroad, not making a formal debut after she returned, but being introduced to society informally through a series of dinners her mother gave for her.

Mr. Love is a graduate of Princeton, 1926. He is an only son and he has two sisters, Mrs. Horace Keeler [Geraldine Love] of Cleveland and Mrs. James Otis [Edwena Love] of Chicago. Miss Schuttler has one sister, Jane.

Mr. and Mrs. Schuttler will celebrate their thirtieth wedding anniversary today.

Hunting Trials at Milburn.

About forty active members of the Onwentsia Hunt club will be out this afternoon for the hunters' trials to be held on the club grounds at Milburn over natural country hunted regularly by members of this exclusive and sporty club. There will be judges at every fence to check minutely the performance of the horses and the way in which their owners handle them, for the three main judges, Donald F. McPherson, Benjamin Leslie Behr, and John Cudahy of Milwaukee, will not be close enough to recognize small faults at the jumps, although they will be able to see the entire course.

Ticking [hitting the fence], veering away and a flat refusal to go over are among the faults, and, of course, I suppose throwing the rider and more or less breaking his or her neck would be the worst fault of all.

The trials are really just a club competition among members, each entry riding his or her own horse, and the entries will start out singly, one minute apart, the first one starting at 2 o'clock. Some of those who will ride are Mrs. J. Andrews King, Mrs. Merrill Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. Austin H. Niblack, Mrs. Samuel J. Walker, Mrs. Kimball Salisbury, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen Jr., Mrs. Donald B. Douglas, Laurance H. Armour, and Roger Hyatt. After the trials there will be a tea at the clubhouse.

Change Hat Rule for Symphony.

Most women symphony concertgoers will be delighted to learn that the board of trustees of the orchestra has at last lent a sympathetic ear to protests against the "hats off" rule which has been enforced so rigidly for twenty years.

After a meeting yesterday the trustees announced that "the rule requiring removal of hats at Chicago Symphony orchestra concerts has been rescinded until further notice." The rule was, of course, passed in the day of wide brimmed chapeaux and high hairdresses which seriously obstructed the vision of people in the audience.

In recent years, with fashion sanctioning the wearing of flat, tiny hats over trimly sheared heads, there have been many discussions between women and the ushers who have had to enforce the rule.

Mrs. Richard Gambrill Jr. is to be an absentee hostess today at a luncheon party for her little daughter, Helen, and her classmates of the eighth grade at the Roycemore school. The luncheon is to be held at the Gambrill residence in Evanston following the performance of the Junior league children's theater play, "The Secret Garden." The play will be given at 10:30 o'clock at the Playhouse.

Mrs. Gambrill will not be able to

A Job a Day

Every little improvement we make in our home right now helps us—and the other fellow, too.

Have you ever considered Venetian blinds? Their assets are many and they afford an almost perfect control of light and air. One must be sure that they are of good wood, smoothly lacquered. Such lovely colors, too, that they come in! Much of their durability depends upon the sturdiness of their tapes and cords and the correct mechanism of such features as automatic locking, slider, girder, cord equalizers, and center support. Some of the best grades are detachable and may be easily removed for the occasional cleaning. LOUISE BARGELT.

Father Spoils Child; Mother Faces Problem

Solution May Be Found in Compromise.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

"I don't know how I'm ever going to bring up my little girl of 5. When we were alone through the day she used to be all right, but as soon as her father appeared there was trouble. He indulged her in every whim. I don't mean just giving her things, but letting her have her way and denying her nothing.

"He doesn't expect her to obey and now this is beginning to show in her actions when he is not around. Tears and tantrums are measures that work with him, but not with me. He even calls me cruel because I don't melt and fly around for them. He's really making our little girl a disagreeable child."

Here is a picture that is just the opposite of yesterday's in one way—in that this father is overindulgent and lacking in all sense of what we used to call discipline.

But in another way it is exactly like yesterday's situation—in that the mother and father use different ways of handling the child. They need to get together, but they must also want to, or they will get nowhere. The trouble is in a case like this that the matter takes on a personal tinge—or that one will try to gain more favor with the child than the other.

In a case like this I'd suggest that they begin by both yielding a little. This mother may be too strict, and she might relax a little. Then, let the father agree to be a little less indulgent. This compromise might go into effect as a starting point.

Then, they might read aloud and discuss together the book recommended yesterday for the parents of babies and young children, "Child Care and Training," by Faegre & Anderson.

Today I want to add a suggestion for reading together by the parents of boys and girls in their teens—or from 10 to 13, which we call the pre-adolescent years.

"The Psychology of the Adolescent," by Leta Hollingsworth.

"The Adolescent," by Schwab & Veeder; first three chapters.

"Fathers and Sons," by Samuel Drury.

"Parenthood and the Newer Psychology," by Frank H. Richardson.

There are many other fine books, but these are brief and popular in style. Details of price will be sent on request. Please enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

INSTALLMENT LX.

COMPLETE EXONERATION.

Meanwhile, Natasha was acquitted—bad enough in itself, but infinitely worse because of the conditions which left her still under a cloud. He had seen enough of Neil Starkey to know the latter would not rest till Natasha Andreyev was cleared.

Immediately after his call on Natasha he went up to London to make his usual inquiries at the Kilburn tobacco shop, and there found Bert's letter, which was at once a shock and a relief. He answered it on a borrowed typewriter, signed it "C. Lomax," and made an appointment to meet the writer at Glastonbury station.

At this point Mrs. Tilbury's information ends, and we must turn to Bert.

Tilbury, after seeing his wife off on the train, bumped into the waiting youth as if by accident, and hospitably invited him up to the house. By the time the two reached the lodge Bert's mind was in utter confusion. Was Tilbury the man he had expected to meet? All along he had had a tentative suspicion that he might be the real "C. L."—but perhaps he was mistaken. Anyhow he did not refuse the port. He drank several glasses, and the stuff made him feel queer. His host suggested fresh air, whereupon they walked up to the ruin, but at the entrance to the crypt he sank down in a stupor, and knew nothing more till, on coming round he found himself wretchedly sick and minus his papers. Although he was fairly sure what had happened, he dared not complain. When, on the next day, Neil came to interview him, he thought it was Tilbury, of whom he now had an overpowering dread.

The next bit is contributed by two motorcyclists, a grocer's clerk and his girl, who happened on Tilbury a few seconds after he had shut the door on his victim. What they saw was a pleasant spoken man bending over a drunken chap. They laughed, joked for a bit, and went their way totally unsuspicious of anything wrong.

Imagination must supply the rest. Tilbury, straining his ears at the bottom of the stairs, realizes Natasha is unconscious, possibly dead. He drags Bert to the house, revives him, sends him off home, then dashes back to the crypt to listen again. The dogs know the girl is there. They sniff and bark to such an extent that he is obliged to shut them up. He discovers Neil's two seater in the lane, drives it to the bridge, and leaves it.

What is to be done? After desperate attempts to get down into the hole, he sees what an impossible feat it is, and sends a frantic wire to his wife.

During the long night he works busily, painting signs to keep off trespassers, padlocking the door, and stealing backwards and forwards from the house to the crypt. In the morning he sends the charwoman about her business. The body will have to be disposed of—but how? If only Con would come! Her relations live six miles off the railway. No telling when his telegram reached her, or how long it will take her to get back.

Connie Tilbury did her utmost, but even so she could not arrive home before early evening. The sight of the police turned her blood to ice, and though her husband's warning glance stayed the question on her lips, it could not explain matters. How was she to guess the true situation?

One of the few independent actions of her married life was to loose the Alsatians, whose barking got on her nerves—and by that simple deed she shipwrecked everything.

"Will they hang Connie?" whispered Natasha when, days later, she had heard all the gruesome details.

"I imagine not. A life sentence, with something off for good conduct. No one doubts that she was entirely under her husband's thumb."

The girl shuddered as she thought of Mrs. Tilbury's abject subjugation and the maze of crime into which it had led her. She knit her brows and turned to her companion with a sudden question.

"Neil—what was it about that cold blooded toad which gave him such power over women? He was not attractive in any sense we understand, not even very definitely masculine, and yet I'm convinced poor Caroline would never have fallen such an easy victim if he hadn't exerted an almost hypnotic spell over her."

"Well, there you are. Look at Landru and some of the other scoundrels who have preyed upon women. Tilbury's main asset was that transparent naiveté of his which made him somehow rather appealing. He was persistent, too, with a tireless capacity for taking pains. His wife, of course, must have known the utter brutality under the surface, which makes her devotion all the more amazing. When I was choking the life out of him she attacked me like a tigress. It's a strange irony to think her own bullet did for him in the end."

"Yes, in a way she's every bit as remarkable as he was. She has courage, you know. Picture what she must have endured during the two hours she was left here, knowing that at any moment something might wreck their scheme!"

"If she'd realized the risk Alfred was running with the oxalic acid she'd have been worse frightened. Graves declares the fellow might easily have collapsed on the way home. You remember how his muscles twitched even on Monday night and how his voice was almost gone? Typical symptoms of oxalic acid poisoning—though they could have come from other causes, which is what put Graves off . . . But here—I'm forgetting your letters. Two of them. Want to look at them now?"

She perused the first with growing wonderment, and handed it to him without comment. The note, several times reforwarded, ran as follows:

Swan Lodge, Belford.

Dear Miss Andreyev:

What I have to say will excuse me, a stranger, writing to you.

On the evening of 20th March I motored my old father to Torquay, stopping for petrol at a filling station near Bristol. Our car is an eight cylindered Getz, 1929 model, dark green with wire tires. My father sat inside, and as he was suffering from acute neuralgia, had his head wrapped in a woolen muffler. I wore a light tweed coat, a small beige hat, and carried a dark red, rather shabby bag. I am neutral blonde in coloring, aged 24, and my features are quite a good deal like yours, to judge by your published photograph.

As the filling station man had no change, I looked round to ask my father for some, but seeing he was asleep didn't disturb him, and gave the proprietor a pound note. I was anxious to get to an hotel, because the night air was bad for my father's complaint. Not until I read your defense did it ever occur to me that the two of us had been mistaken for you and your unfortunate aunt. I didn't dream, of course, that a car stated positively to be a Geisler could turn out to be a Getz, or that any man, however muffled up, would be taken for a woman. I cannot tell you how bitterly I regret not waking up to this sooner. Thank God you had a clever counsel, and that the tea shop girl was so enamoured of your bag!

Yours sincerely,

JANET MACWHIRTER.

While Neil was shaking his head over this communication, the second letter was put into his hand. It was neither more nor less than a stiff apology from Emily Braselton, who, up to the moment of Tilbury's decease, had continued to harbor suspicions against the acquitted girl.

Natasha lay back against her pillows and turned thoughtful eyes towards the open window. All this opulent beauty was now hers, but how could she ever enjoy it? No, Stoke Paulton must go to some one who could not tap its vein of dreadful memories.

"Nothing that matters. I was thinking, that's all . . . By the way, do you see what Emily says at the end—how even I must realize my conduct invited misconstruction? It's perfectly true. I could hardly have expected her to believe in me, when you yourself didn't quite think me innocent."

"Isn't it time to forget all that?" he said, "though now you've mentioned it, I've never wholly understood why you couldn't tell me the truth."

"Can't you see how impossible it was? In the earlier stages I couldn't have thrust on you the unwelcome responsibility of knowing I was scheming to evade the law. After all, you were little more than a stranger. Later on, when the evidence began to look black against me, it would have been positively fatal. In order to clear me you'd have sacrificed Michael—O, yes, you know very well you would!—and nothing would have convinced you that bringing him back here would have injured my case, as well as ruining him. Even now I don't see how I could have acted differently."

leave the theater and drive north with her little guests because the removal of the makeup which she uses in her role of the gardener in the performance is so long and tedious a process that the children's healthy young appetites for their luncheon would not permit them to wait for her.

Swim Meet for Children

About 25 children will take part in a swimming meet to be held at 11 o'clock this morning in the Women's Athletic club pool. There will be a variety of events for children of varying ages, including a turtle and polliwog race for the tiny ones under 6 years old, free style and backstroke races of different lengths according to ages for the older children, a medley relay for girls over 12, and fancy diving for all of the competitors.

President and Mrs. Robert Hutchins are to give a buffet luncheon for 80 guests at noon today, later taking them to the Chicago-Wisconsin football game. Among those present will be President and Mrs. Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin, Dr. and Mrs. James H. Breasted, Dr. and Mrs. C. Phillip Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar J. Goodspeed, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Nitze, Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. Kellog Fairbank, Miss Janet Fairbank, Miss Cecil Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Aldis, Mrs. Waller Borden, and Harold H. Swift.

Two Hockey Games Today

North shore hockey fans are planning to be at the New Trier field in Winnetka this morning to see two teams chosen from the schools allied with the North Shore Field Hockey association play two top grade teams selected from the schools allied with the Chicago Field Hockey association.

Weather permitting, the games will begin at 10 o'clock. Henrietta Boal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ayres Boal; Deborah Leonard, daughter of John R. Leonard, and Jane Waldner, the Harry Waldners' daughter, are among the outstanding Winnetka players. Mrs. Hallett W. Thorne, Mrs. Warner Washburne, Miss Susan Miller, Miss Margot Atkin, and Miss Harriet Leonard are to play on the all north shore team.

Another sign of how times are changing: a request by the Fortnightly that we announce that the third regular meeting of the club will be held next week on Monday instead of Thursday because of Thanksgiving. Maj. Francis Yeats-Brown, author of "The Bengal Lancer," will speak on "When Kings Rode to Delhi" at Monday's meeting, which starts at 2:30 o'clock. In years past the Fortnightly never liked to have mention of any of the club's activities in club or social columns, but times are changing, fortunately for club and society editors!

Assistants for Marshall Debut.

When Miss Dorothy Marshall is presented to society by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin H. Marshall, at a tea next Saturday at their Wilmette studio, she will be assisted by the following young women: The Misses Nancy Traylor, Jean Schweppe, Barbara Graf, Suzanne Morirs, Eleanor Page, Florence Carr, Eleanor Litsinger, and Jessie Bond of Lexington, Ky., who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Roy Carruthers of the Drake hotel.

The Arts club has sent out cards announcing that Vicki Baum is to give her lecture entitled "Looking at Life" before the club members next Sunday evening following a supper at 7:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Howell B. Erminger Jr. of 199 Lake Shore drive and her daughter, Miss Carolyn Erminger, left yesterday for Boston to attend the Yale-Harvard game this afternoon. They will spend the first few days of next week in New York and then Miss Erminger will go to Whale inn at Goshen, Mass., for a short stay and later to Northampton, Mass., for a reunion with some of her former classmates at Smith college. They will return to Chicago in about 10 days.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Wheeler returned a few days ago from a two months' sojourn abroad. Mrs. Wheeler is co-chairman with Mrs. William H. Mitchell of the Chicago committee of the Woman's Organization for National Prohibition Reform. She went to Europe in September to see her mother, Mrs. Henry J. Patten, who has been ill in France, and to have a rest herself after her arduous work before and after the national conventions.

Mrs. Runnells Visits Friends

Mrs. Clive Runnells, who has been residing in Santa Barbara for the last few years, has been in Lake Forest this week visiting her old friends. She spent several days with Mrs. Philip D. Armour and is to be with the William McCormick Blairs over the weekend at their Lake Bluff estate. Mr. and Mrs. Blair are to give a dinner tonight for their guest.

Mrs. Nelson L. Barnes left on Wednesday for New York and will return to Chicago for Thanksgiving.

William A. Bond of the Webster hotel returned yesterday from a five weeks' hunting trip in the Utah cañons. He will be host at a family dinner party this evening following a recital at the Webster.

The Alliance Française announces a lecture by Mme. Roger Cros of Northwestern university on "The Real Guignol" at 12 o'clock today in the Alliance quarters in the Fine Arts building.

The first of the annual series of North Shore Fortnightly dances will be held this evening at the Country club of Evanston.

The South Shore Country club will hold a dinner dance this evening following the Chicago-Wisconsin football game at Stagg field. Tomorrow evening Lowell Thomas is to talk at the club on his trip from "Singapore to Mandalay."

Mrs. Andrew R. Sherriff is to open her residence at 1320 North State street for a meeting of the Northern Illinois branch of the League of American Pen Women at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Arden Shore Election

Mrs. Robert B. Gregory (left), honorary president of the Arden Shore association, and an interested sponsor of the Arden Shore camp for more than 30 years, congratulated Mrs. Kingman Douglass (center) on her election yesterday to the presidency of the association to succeed Mrs. George A. Mason (right). Mrs. Mason is to become a vice president. The association is to give a benefit ball. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Pattern Developed in Wine-Red Crepe Provides Chic Frock for Classroom

JUNIOR GIRL'S DRESS.

This smart, up to the minute frock is an ideal model for classroom wear, and you can't choose anything better than a wine red wool crêpe. The tie can be made of white rough silk crêpe or of white piqué, and can be fastened to the neckline so it can be readily removed for laundering. Velvet will be lovely for a "best" frock.

The pattern, No. 3181, comes in sizes 11, 13, 15, and 17 years. Size 15 requires 3 yards of 39 inch material with ? yard of 35 inch contrasting.

Three Negro Groups Unite for Concert

BY EDWARD MOORE.

THREE Negro male choruses, all of whom have taken parts of some importance in the Chicagoland Music Festivals—the Umbrian, Federal, and Delt Glee clubs—joined forces and appeared in combined form at Orchestra hall last night under the name of Um-Fed-Det. They are good singers. Under the beat of their two conductors—W. E. Myricks and E. A. Simpson—they displayed rich, solid tone, a natural as well as trained ability to vitalize rhythm, and a further ability (one to be envied and if possible followed) to project the English language in understandable fashion.

Two soloists appeared. Edward H. Boatner, baritone, sang a group of songs of which two of the most tuneful were the product of his own pen. Walter R. Gossette played solos by Diton and Dett on the organ.

The Le Brun singers, who would seem to have been organized on the theory that singing is an enjoyable exercise, appeared at Kimball hall last night under the direction of Mme. Antoinette Le Brun. In the great the program consisted of excerpts from the best known operas and operettas, and these were presented as solos, duets, trios, quartets, and choruses, the choral group consisting of some forty-five singers. It was a program planned to please rather than instruct, and it served its purpose admirably.

Orient Society Names Shepherd as President

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Dr. William R. Shepherd of Columbia university was elected the first president of the New Orient Society of America last night at the first annual dinner held in the Palmer house. The society, the outgrowth of the New Orient Society of Chicago formed two years ago, was organized to promote friendly relations on a cultural basis between the east and the west. Its membership roll includes scholars both in this country and abroad.

Prof. James H. Breasted of the University of Chicago, honorary president, presided. A report of the executive committee, read by Henry Field, revealed that the society now has 404 members, forty of them outside the United States.

Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, was the chief speaker. He discussed education, expressing a concern for the future of research, emphasizing its essential place in the promotion of scholarship.

"The future of education does not worry us very much," Dr. Hutchins said. "But the future of research is a different matter. Without research education dies. Interest in research is concentrated in very few foundations and individuals. Libraries, laboratories, institutes will fade and disappear unless the public agrees that they are essential to education.

"The time has come to adjust and clarify institutions for the promotion of scholarship," Dr. Hutchins said.

Dr. Breasted, Edwin H. Cassels, Henry Field, John P. Kellogg, Dr. Berthold Laufer, and Prof. A. T. Olmstead were elected to the board.

Fickle Fiance Keeps This Girl on Tenterhooks

Now He Calls on Her, Now He Doesn't.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

What to do with the suitor who comes a-calling and a-dating when it pleases him, and him only?

"Gertrude" has one of him. She loves him madly, so it is a foregone conclusion she'll take his treatment, no matter how she may protest. The chap is grand when he is with her. Treats her like a queen. Is proud to show her off to his friends. Is generous and very, very attractive; consequently, popular. So when he has a couple of invitations on, the girl whose love he knows is of the long-abiding variety is left in the lurch for the evening.

Now, we have learned to deal with this type of offender better than our forbears are reported to have done. A broken or a neglected engagement meant in the old days "the end." A succession of them, at any rate, branded the gentleman as unfit for the husband rôle.

But modern observation leads to the conclusion that often this vacillating fiancé may be turned into a husband loyal and devoted enough for modern woman's needs. In fact, we've seen him converted into a reliable, safe and often hard-to-get-away-from-the-fireside type of husband. So we are not sympathetic with the idea of dismissing the gentleman permanently.

Instead, we suggest putting the modern wits to work; not mooning around home the disappointed evening. There are always friends who can be called up for a game of bridge, or for a movie trip. Or, maybe for the indulgence of a good book or a long postponed sewing job.

Then, in the matter of keeping the evenings busy, we suggest that this one young man be not the only resource. Have other interests. Yes, even a male friend or two for emergency use. If hectoring the fiancé will not cure him of his seeming habits of indifference, simply go ahead and work out an interesting life for yourself on the side.

Wise Femme Wards Off Lines About the Eyes

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

It seems to me I'm hearing much more than usual about lines around the eyes these days. No doubt the economic pressure of the moment is writing a number of these into former placid faces. The worried light that lies in so many eyes seen in a day's walk must be responsible for a number of the lines beneath.

But there are still other reasons for their appearance. Eye strain ranks first in causes. Chronic tiredness comes next. You can see in children's faces how fatigue will put temporary lines under the eyes. Chronic debility will, too, as will undernourishment. Children revive quickly with sleep. But the older ones who do not force themselves into taking the sleep cure succeed only in deepening the lines and lending them a permanent welcome.

Believe me, once these lines are set it is no simple trick to eradicate them. So the best thing is not to let them "set." If it is eyestrain the remedy needs no comment here. If it is chronic tiredness a general overhauling is needed. Perhaps a physician should be interviewed, for this physical debility is generally of constitutional nature, although I do think chronic tiredness can be brought on by muscular inertia. A woman who never takes herself out doors for a walk is often its victim. You are chronically tired when you never get fresh air into your system or move about briskly.

Now, there are special eye creams recommended for overnight application after a light, tapping form of massage. And these are good—but only after the inner cause has been routed. If the blood supply is thin, the circulation poor I can't hold much hope for under eye line eradication. You must tone up the system first and do it with the only commendible form of blood and muscle toning—namely, exercise in the open air, shower baths, and vigorous rubs to stir up blood and muscle action.

Don't wait until the skin below the eyes becomes loose and baggy! This condition is associated with kidney trouble, but it is often achieved through general physical debility brought on through lazy muscles and an impoverished blood supply.

MRS. PAT G. MORRIS

Miss Jean Waddle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Waddle, was married to Pat G. Morris at the First Episcopal church of La Grange yesterday. The bride is a graduate of Knox college and the University of Wisconsin. Mr. Morris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Thomas Morris of Murray, Ky. He is a graduate of the University of Illinois and a vice president of the Northern Trust company.

Parisian Party Frock for Winter Days and Nights

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The proposed merger of day and evening dresses into practically the same kind of frock has been successfully effected in smart French society. The Paris dressmakers like to call this kind of dress "speakeasy."

Fashionable women in Paris, though they lack the speakeasy in which to wear such frocks, wear them to the movies, the theater, and the cabaret. They are, these dresses, really just like the party dresses that most women wore in simpler days, when one dress for special occasions of ordinary life was enough and a-plenty.

The day and evening party dress shown in our sketch is one of the prettiest to be found in Paris at this time. Maggy Rouff designed and made it of a pale blue dull surfaced crêpe marocain. It has a little bolero jacket with big, bishop-peasant sleeves made of brown velvet. The jacket is sewed to the dress. In front the pale blue bodice is slightly draped at the neck and fitted into a V-topped set-in girdle, that ties on the left side of the waistline.

The skirt is Maggy Rouff's front flared skirt and is straight in back.

Life would be an awful bore if every one were perfect, knew all he should know and never had any problems to solve. Luckily there's no danger of such a state of affairs coming to pass.

So today being Saturday—on with the question clinic!

First a query from Miss L. S.: "I wonder if you could tell me why mother's peaches always turn dark and somewhat dry on the top?"

Darkening of peaches usually is caused by either too long cooking in a possibly caramelized sugar sirup or from standing exposed to air. Since your mother's peaches became dark and also dry at the top of the can, I suspect that she did not completely cover the peaches and fill the can to overflowing with scalding sugar sirup.

Also from Miss S.: "You mentioned 'brown sugar sirup' the other day for use on waffles and fried cakes. How does one make it?"

Most simple and most delicious, Miss S. Merely dissolve two cups of medium or dark brown sugar in two-thirds cup of water and cook, stirring gently, until sirupy. Do not cook until too thick, or when your sirup cools it will tend to be heavy and stringy.

From Miss J. T. come the last question: "May peanut butter be substituted for fat in waffle recipes?"

Yes, but not in equal quantities. Most fats other than butter are 100 per cent actual fat. Peanut butter contains about 50 per cent fat. Twice as much peanut butter must then be used as was called for of fat. Butter is only about 85 per cent fat.

Radio broadcast—WMAQ and WCFL, Chicago.

Today A. A. Stagg will lead a Maroon team on to Stagg field for the last time, so far as anybody knows. Dr. Clarence Spears in his first season at Wisconsin, will lead out the most successful Badger team of a decade. The odds are against both Mr. Stagg and the Maroons.

Back in 1894, two years after the University of Chicago opened, Coach Stagg sent his boys against Wisconsin for the first time, and they lost, 20 to 0. During the next thirty-two years Stagg-coached teams more than held their own with the Badgers, and football, with Stagg as one of its greatest sponsors, was developed on a rising line.

Badgers Have Edge.

During the last four years the Badgers have won four times over the Maroons. Next year the Maroons may be John Doe's Maroons. But today they are still Stagg's Maroons, and that single fact is the basis for hope that there will be joy along the Midway tonight.

On the face of the records Wisconsin should have a big edge. They have lost only one game this season, and that to Purdue, by one point. The Maroons, after a brave start, which left them undefeated after four games, have lost three times in a row.

But they look better, in the flesh, than they do on paper, and their attitude this week, though seldom expressed orally, has patently been that they must win this game for Stagg, even if they have to add a few cubits to their stature to do it.

Expect 20,000 Fans.

Whether this emotional drive can make up for a comparative lack of skill is the question which 20,000 spectators will see. In weight, physical condition and reserves there is no significant difference between the two teams. The field will be dry and fast, which should help both.

Probably the biggest difference in skill will be the superior blocking of the Badgers. Wisconsin has a four pound average advantage in the line, but the Maroons, with six seniors, have a compensating edge in experience.

Defensively the Maroons have done remarkably well against line thrusts, except in the Purdue game and in the second half of the Illinois game. The particular bulwarks are the two veteran tackles, Bill Cassels and John Spearing. Spearing, incidentally, will probably play part of the game against George Thurner, a friend and classmate of his from Washington High school, Milwaukee.

Hold Secret Practice.

Ray Zenner and Ell Patterson are fight, knifing guards; Keith Parsons will have an edge in both weight and experience on Koenig at center; and the two Maroon ends are better at defense than they are on attack.

Summers, Birney and Flinn are fine defensive backs against running plays. But it will be against forward passes that they must be most alert. Coach Spears, never known for his passing tactics, has developed an excellent aerial attack this year. Last Saturday the Badgers completed three consecutive long passes, the last coming in the final 30 seconds of play for the winning touchdown against the strong Minnesota team. Against this weapon, and against the danger of long returns of punts, Coach Stagg has devoted most of this week's practice.

The Maroon offensive, centering around the speed of Sahlin and Zimmer, running from Stagg's new "whirlwind shift" is the first good mystery on the Midway for some time. Yesterday the team ran through its plays entirely in secret, with newspaper men and former players barred, though an inkling of an impending surprise trickled through the guards. Whatever it is, today's game is likely to be a wide-open performance.

23 End Careers.

Thirteen Maroons and ten Badgers will be playing their last game today. The Maroons are Capt. Don Birney, Allan Summers, Hugh Mendenhall, Pompeo Toigo, Warren Bellstrom, Carl Gabel, Frank Thomson, William Cassels, John Spearing, George Behnur, Robert Shapiro, Raymond Zenner, and Keith Parsons. The Badger seniors are Capt. Greg Kabat, Mickay McGuire, Joseph Linfor, Frank Molinaro, William Koenig, George Thurner, David Tobias, Nello Pacetti, John Schneller, and Ralph Lovshin.

The Wisconsin team is at the Shoreland hotel.

BUCKEYES, ILLINI MEET IN ANNUAL THRILLER TODAY

BY FRENCH LANE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 18.—The traditional football warfare between the University of Illinois and Ohio State, which for many seasons has been sending thousands of Illini and Buckeye partisans into hysterics and at times has shocked the entire Western conference, will flare up again at Memorial stadium here tomorrow.

Almost without exception, each chapter of the history of this war reveals a thrilling episode. It is a football story that will not fade into the haze of the past. It excites the old grads on the eve of every struggle and they were excited and noisy here tonight as they told and retold the stories of the games of other seasons.

Illini are Underdogs.

Most of them expect another encounter tomorrow which will throw them into a new stage of frenzy. The stage is set, except that there is no championship at stake, as it has been in other years. Illinois is the underdog. The Buckeyes seem to have the power to crush their old rivals.

The statistics show that almost invariably the underdogs have won this game in a blood stirring climax. So probably that is the reason there was so much noise and joy on the snow covered Illinois campus tonight. If the dope goes wrong, let that happen tomorrow, is the way the Illinois followers looked upon the situation.

If these young men from Illinois and Ohio State are going to attempt to grind each other into the soggy turf of the Illinois playing field when Referee Gardner toots his whistle at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, they showed no signs of it late today. If any were in the mood to mutilate a rival they didn't show it when both teams were working out on the field at the same time.

Tarpaulin Saves Field.

The joint workout was made necessary by the snow blanket which covers most of this section of Illinois. The field, protected by a tarpaulin during the snow storm, was about the only spot downstate not covered by snow.

The Ohio State team is quartered at Danville, but could not find a dry spot

Carnera Stops Jose Santa in Sixth Round

New York, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Primo Carnera, Italian giant, scored a technical knockout over Jose Santa, huge Portuguese, in the sixth round before a crowd of six thousand in Madison Square Garden tonight. Santa was down for counts of eight in the second and third rounds and for nine in the sixth before Referee Jed Cahan stopped the fight. Carnera weighed 270½ pounds; Santa, 247.

The sixth round lasted one minute and ten seconds, somewhat longer than the experts had expected the entire fight to go, but Santa put up a courageous and at times powerful battle.

His punches, however, looked as if they were intended for the slow motion cameras and his feet often were planted exactly the opposite to where nature intended them to rest, but his unorthodox system of throwing right hands when in doubt often puzzled Carnera, who had the benefit of much more experience.

ELMHURST HORSE RETAINS TITLE AT KANSAS CITY

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Roxie Highland, owned by Miss Mary Gwyn Fiers of Oklahoma City, and Rio Saxon, bay gelding owned by Mrs. A. C. Thompson of Elmhurst, Ill., tonight successfully defended their grand championship titles at the American royal live stock and horse show.

The 8 year old chestnut mare of Miss Fiers won the three-gaited saddle horse title for the fourth successive year. Prizes in the event totaled $2,000, the second largest of the show.

Northwestern and Iowa elevens engage in their final football game of the season this afternoon at Dyche stadium, Evanston. For the Wildcats the game presents a final chance to work their way up in the standings, while the Hawkeyes came to town yesterday confident they have a right to expect their first Big Ten victory since 1929.

A crowd of about 25,000 is expected by Northwestern authorities. Extra attendance is looked for because of a specially established general admission price of $1.10 for a section of seats in the west stand and a rate of 55 cents for children of high school age and under who will be admitted to the second deck in the west stands.

Rentner Out of N. U. Lineup.

Coach Dick Hanley will send his team onto the field without the services of its captain, Pug Rentner, whose injuries suffered in the Notre Dame game last Saturday closed his spectacular football career. As a sophomore and a junior Rentner was rated as one of the greatest half backs in the country, but this year he played behind a lighter line and was a marked man.

Harry Leeper, a sophomore, will take Rentner's place. Leeper may be weak on pass defense today, since bad weather the first part of the week kept Coach Hanley from working his new back field combination on this department of the game.

Others in the Wildcat back field are George Potter, quarter back; Jakie Sullivan, left half, and Ollie Olson, full back. Most of the burden of the Purple defense probably will be shunted on the none too husky shoulders of Sullivan, who has averaged more than five and a half yards on each trip with the ball this season.

Kawal to Start as Guard.

Al Kawal made such a hit as a guard last week that he gets the call to start at that position today. He was formerly a quarter back.

Regarded at the start of the season as a game in which Northwestern could afford to let down, today's contest lately has taken on elements that make it appear any one's ball game. Only tradition stands in the way of a Hawkeye victory. The Iowans have developed rapidly in the last few weeks.

Northwestern generally is regarded as a better team than its record shows, but will have to prove it today. The Wildcats will finish sixth in the standings if victorious over Iowa, but will drop to a tie for last position if the Hawkeyes win.

Expect Hawks to Pass.

In all probability Coach Ossie Solem will send his team onto the field with instructions to use passes aplenty. The absence of Rentner will make the Purple more vulnerable to an aerial attack. The Hawkeyes almost succeeded in upsetting Nebraska with a successful passing game, making two touchdowns in this way in the fourth quarter.

Eleven Wildcats, including Capt. Rentner, bid good-by to college football after today's game. The Wildcat regulars who play their final contest today are George Dilley, guard, and Bob Gonya, tackle, both of Chicago; Paul MacDonald, center, of Evanston; Harold Weldin, center, of Peoria, and Dick Fencl, end, of Wheaton. If possible, Coach Hanley will use some of the following nonregulars who will be ineligible for football after today: Cliff Kinder, guard, of Anna, Ill.; Jimmie Jindrich, half back, of Paw Paw, Mich.; Joe La Rocque, guard; William Lenhardt, half back, and Edwin Dubsky, half back, all of Chicago.

THE CAPTAIN'S SUBSTITUTE

Harry Leeper, sophomore half back, will get his chance today when he starts for Northwestern in Capt. Pug Rentner's place. Rentner was hurt in the Notre Dame game last week. Leeper, a good back, has had little chance up to today because of Rentner's unusual ability.

Harvards and Yales Fight to Get in Lineup Today

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Copyright: 1932: By The Chicago Tribune.]

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 18.—Harvard and Yale will meet tomorrow afternoon to decide the Harvard-Yale football championship in their 51st game since the series began 57 years ago. They are capable of a beautiful detachment at these two schools because it means nothing to either side that their teams have not been very successful in the games before this one.

The Harvard-Yale game is the letter game at Harvard, which is to say that any player on the Harvard side who participates in one play against Yale is deemed to have earned his letter. He need not make a touchdown or a tackle or field a punt. He needn't even fall down. It may happen that the one play for which he is sent into the lineup in order that he may earn his letter goes loping off to the opposite side of the field leaving him flat footed.

They Change Often.

He gets his letter though he may not have so much as a fleck of mud on his pants to show for his service and, on the other hand, some unfortunate party who has been bounced around all year in games against Dartmouth, Brown, the Army and Holy Cross, if he comes down with a cracked ankle the day before the big game, doesn't get his.

For this reason there are often more substitutions in the big game than in other games on the Harvard schedule and sometimes players who are not really fit to play are sent in for a few seconds, with a prayer that the traffic will turn up some other street, relieving them of the necessity to do anything heroic and dangerous. For this reason, Warren Casey, a Harvard center, who was hurt in the head in the Army game, may be allowed to go in against Yale briefly Saturday. Not for long; maybe for just a wee touch.

On the Yale side they recognize the Princeton game as a letter game, too, and a successful season is one in which the Yales win both, regardless of the outcome of the others. If a Yale can show 15 minutes of service against Princeton and Harvard combined, he is a letter man. That is the letter of the rule, but it is very hard to keep track of each man's time when so many are playing, so some Yales have received letters who, by an accurate check of their time, might not have been able to show more than 14 minutes 59 3-5 seconds.

Harvard's Ritz Dormitory.

The Harvards came down from Boston this afternoon and practiced a little while, passing the Yales going in for a workout as they came out after theirs. The name Harvard—something about the name Harvard—misrepresents the Harvard team. There are so many kids among them, no more than 19 or 20 years old.

After their practice they were taken up to the Choate school, which is a jolly bit of old England, at Wallingford, a little way up the New Haven line, for a cut from the joint, a sweet and splash of tea, a quiet evening's chitty-chat before the fire and then bye-bye and hip-hip and little old beddo. The Yales have a fine dormitory for visiting football teams in their new gymnasium, but the Harvards prefer Choate for their nights before the big game in New Haven because, for one reason, the new gym is on a car line in New Haven and the street cars run on square wheels.

Tickets Are Plentiful.

The Yales themselves spent the night at the Roxbury school in Cheshire. Dear old Cheshire. Might pop over and pop in on her grace the duchess of Danbury for a spot of bitter before beddy.

The game was selling over the counter on a come-all-you-customers basis at the ticket office in the new gym this afternoon. Not that the Yale A. A. had sent out any pullers to yank in customers by the sleeve, of course. But for the first time in many years

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Big time football—this was the description applied at the Rotary club luncheon today—comes to Cleveland tomorrow when Notre Dame plays the Navy at the Municipal stadium. Seventy thousand, perhaps more, depending on the weather, will attend the first major intersectional game in Cleveland.

Notre Dame's varsity, led by Coach Hunk Anderson, reached Cleveland this morning. It is quartered at the Lake Shore hotel, eight miles from the excitement of downtown Cleveland. The Navy squad docked at Union station an hour and a half after Notre Dame. It is stopping at the Cleveland Athletic club, which is adjacent to the increasing throngs arriving for tomorrow's contest.

Teams Work Out.

The rival elevens worked out at the stadium this afternoon. Notre Dame took the field at 2 o'clock, just about the time 600 Rotarians and guests were leaving their luncheon at the Statler hotel. Edgar [Rip] Miller, head coach of the Naval academy, an alumnus of Notre Dame, where he played three years at tackle and was a member of the 1924 national championship eleven, spoke to the Rotarians and then took his boys to the lake front.

Preliminary workouts were just that. There was a modicum of kicking, passing, and general exercise, most of which was snapped by the photographers of the local newspapers. After the workouts the $10,000 canvas from Notre Dame, transported for this purpose, again was spread over the gridiron. Tomorrow's weather forecast indicates a possibility of rain. But at least 75 per cent of the seats in the stadium are protected from the elements and the players can take care of themselves.

Haley Expects 70,000.

J. Arthur Haley, manager of athletics for Notre Dame, has other concerns. This afternoon he reported advance sales indicated a crowd of 70,000 and he thought that a sell out of 80,000 might result if weather conditions were favorable.

Notre Dame is favored to win tomorrow's game. Coach Rip Miller admitted as much this noon, but Miller also told the Rotarians his team now is at its best, that he hopes to give the Irish a real test before they meet the Army next Saturday in New York.

In this flurry of civic consciousness the importance of Notre Dame's game with the Navy has been forgotten. Coach Anderson still wants to finish the season with victories over the Army and Southern California. Navy furnishes a last opportunity to determine if Notre Dame's veterans have come down to earth and if they will play football as Notre Dame once played it.

Ohio Papers Irked.

This business of testing Notre Dame undoubtedly accounts for the host of New York reporters who will crowd the stadium press box tomorrow. The press box accommodates 60 and there have been many cries of alarm from the small Ohio newspapers, who, having printed columns of advance copy, now find that they must sit with the paying customers.

Notre Dame's marching band of 80 pieces will lead the Notre Dame student body into Cleveland tomorrow.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 18.—Michigan's Wolverines, with tomorrow's game against Minnesota as the final hurdle to a flawless record and the Big Ten championship, steamed into Minneapolis this morning, nearly two hours late. They left Ann Arbor late Thursday afternoon and changed cars in Chicago.

In the party of forty, headed by Athletic Director Fielding Yost and Coach Harry Kipke, were 26 active players, the smallest squad taken to a major contest in recent years, and Jack Heston, son of the immortal Willie, who was a regular until a broken leg in midseason interrupted his back field activities.

Bring Little Brown Jug.

As a guarded treasure on the trip was the legend crested "Little Brown Jug," whose possession for the ensuing year is entrusted to that eleven which emerges victor in the annual struggle. On arrival it was locked in a hotel safe, from where it will be taken back to the Ann Arbor trophy room tomorrow night or left in Minneapolis, as the fates and elements determine.

Contrary to precedent in such matters, Coach Kipke pronounced his reglars in the peak of physical condition, prepared to play their best game of the season. "If Minnesota wins," he said, "it will not be because we are crippled, but because Minnesota outplayed us. Naturally, I expect to win, but a slippery field or the very cold weather predicted would be a serious handicap to our open game."

Wolverine Players Confident.

Michigan's young men impressed one as confident that something to their liking would happen at Minnesota stadium tomorrow afternoon. It wasn't like overconfidence, but the attitude of alert young chaps, conscious of their strength and here for just one purpose. That one purpose, of course, is to continue their winning sequence and acquire their first unshared conference title since 1925.

On the other hand, Minnesota's Gophers in their final practice in the fieldhouse apparently had regained all the morale missing earlier in the week.

Weather conditions apparently worry coaches more than the players. About two inches of snow fell today. Predictions were that the mercury will be about 10 to 15 above at game time.

Eleven members of the Minnesota squad will complete their three years of eligibility tomorrow. They are: Capt. Wally Hass, Jack Manders, Jerry Griffin, Sammy Swartz, Marshall Wells, Kenneth Gay, Brad Robinson, Mervin Dillner, Sulo Koski, Jim Dennerly, and Elmer Appman. The six Wolverines finishing competition are: Capt. Ivy Williamson, Harry Newman, Rod Cox, Charles De Baker, Abe Marcovsky, and Leslie Frisk.

Dates Back to 1903.

Now about this "Little Brown Jug," which isn't a little brown jug at all, but a five gallon affair, once supposed to have contained drinking water for the Michigan eleven of 1903, which came here to play Minnesota. That contest resulted in a 6-6 tie, the only time Michigan was scored against that season.

According to the legend built up, Tommy Roberts, Michigan student manager, feared the drinking water here would be doctored in their dressing room, so brought the aqua pura from Ann Arbor. Roberts, now a real estate operator in Oak Park, with a cheer leader son at Ann Arbor, carrying on for Michigan, in his present years of maturity, probably will admit no such fear existed, but the jug was to prevent any ill effects to the team from change of water.

Again, the jug was supposed to have been stolen here from the Michigan dressing room and to have been hidden for several years.

Here's Still Another Angle.

Contrary to the theft legend, Oscar Munson, then Minnesota trainer and now in charge of all athletic equipment, says he found the jug in the Michigan dressing rooms after the game and took it to Dr. L. J. Cooke, now assistant athletic director here. Dr. Cooke suggested the score be painted on its side and the jug kept until Michigan regained it with a victory.

In the interim the jug has disappeared half a dozen times, whether for publicity purposes or otherwise.

Anyway, there is a Little Brown Jug here to be delivered to Minnesota if the Gophers win tomorrow. Confidence in the result did not prompt Michigan to tempt the fates by leaving the jug in Ann Arbor.

STADIUM FILES $150,000 SUIT AGAINST HAWKS

Fail to Reach Agreement in New Parley.

Praecipe of a suit for $150,000 against the Chicago Blackhawk hockey club was filed in superior court yesterday by Arthur Dixon, attorney for the Chicago Stadium corporation. Declaration in the suit, which will allege breach of contract, will be filed in the near future, Dixon said.

The suit is the outgrowth of the controversy between the hockey club and the Stadium over rents. The Stadium contends it has a lease which does not expire until next spring. Maj. Frederic McLaughlin, Blackhawk owner, claims the Stadium broke the lease last summer by failing to abide by the agreement in the matter of fixing dates for home games. McLaughlin has taken the hockey club to the Coliseum for its home games.

Conferences between McLaughlin and Sidney N. Strotz, president of the Stadium, were definitely concluded yesterday afternoon, Strotz said, when the hockey magnate turned down the Stadium's offer and prepared a counter proposition which the Stadium was unable to accept.

The Stadium, Strotz said, had agreed to sign a new lease, cutting the rent for hockey games from $4,500 nightly to 35 per cent of the receipts, provided McLaughlin accepted the Stadium bid of $100,000 cash for territorial rights in Chicago. The Stadium wishes to place a second National league team in the city. McLaughlin is opposed to the second team.

"We have decided to discontinue negotiations, now that the suit has been filed," Strotz said. "The suit would have been withdrawn had we been able to reach a compromise."

Harvard, Yale Battle Today for H's and Y's

there were not enough Harvards and Yales combined with $4.40 apiece to spare to take up the 80,000 seats and there was no reason why the public shouldn't be allowed to buy the left-overs.

And even so, the attendance was officially, though not positively, guessed at no more than 60,000, which would leave the end zones more or less blank.

The Harvards instituted an old football rite last year. At the end of their final practice they started a bonfire and burned the tackling dummy as a gesture of exultation over the tyrant, football. This season, in the interests of economy, they were induced to content themselves with a battered blocking dummy. Yale is not instituting any old rites involving the destruction of school property at this time. Mr. Paul Barnett of the Yale A. A. was asked about this and he said, "Do you know what those dummies cost?"

Somebody Steals Fence.

Fifty years from now the origin of the Harvard rite of dummy suttee will be lost amid 40 conflicting versions by as many old codgers who weren't around at the time, but that is the way old rites begin. I am advised by certain Yales with a conscientious regard for the exact truth about things that the surviving sector of the old Yale campus fence, a relic now preserved in a photograph gallery for Yale captains to sit upon for their official photographs, is not a piece of the true fence.

The Harvards stole this fence from the photographer a couple of years ago and took it up to Boston, where they gave it back to the Yales at a joint dinner, but if this was intended to institute an old form, like the little brown jug custom or the California ax custom, it didn't. The fence hasn't been stolen since.

The fact that both teams have had their little failures on the way to the climax of their season need have no bearing on the character of tomorrow's game or the social grandeur of the show. Yale often begins clumsily and matures just in time to make two nights, against Princeton and Harvard, in the closing weeks of the season. The Harvard team began with bright promise, then several important players were hurt and, in the practice leading up to the game with West Point, the club could not practice together. Since then it has beaten Holy Cross and the match tomorrow seems close, between two teams distinctly below the grade of Pitt, Army and Brown.

Each Has Five Veterans.

Each team has five players in the starting lineup who started the 1931 game. On the Harvard starting lineup are five others who did not start last year's game, but were in it before the end, and Yale has three in this category.

Yale, however, will start a third string center, David Howland, and Jimmy De Angelis, a guard who was important in the Dartmouth game, will be withheld for a time at least. Barrett, a back, and Gundlach, right guard, in Harvard's starting roster, are sophomores.

DICK TRACY—An Important Date

A DEER KNOWS HIS PLACE WHEN ARCHER IS NEAR

It's Just Out of Range, Hunter Learns.

BY BOB BECKER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Blaney, Mich., Nov. 18.—The four Michigan deer hunters who are here on the special archery hunting preserve to bag buck deer with steel tipped arrows and heavy bows, will tell you that anything can happen when you take the trail to outwit the smart white-tail deer. After hiking through the snowblown cedar swamps and hardwood ridges and over well traveled animal trails with this quartet of archers we are willing to admit that they are right.

For example, it appears that sometimes an old buck knows a bow and hunter is limited on the killing range of his weapon. This was illustrated the other morning when we started back to camp in company with Capt. O. E. Marvel of Grand Rapids, Mich. It was around 10:15 a. m. All had arisen at 5, eaten breakfast and then hurried into the archery preserve to see if we couldn't connect with a buck before lunch.

Deer Leave Distinct Trail.

As he slowly walked along on an old grade, next to a cedar swamp Capt. Marvel kept his bow and arrow ready. The animals were accustomed to cross and recross the grade while traveling from the swamp to the hard wood ridge nearby. In fact, the snow on the grade, a dandy open boulevard for the deer, was so trampled in places that it appeared as if someone had driven live stock along this open area. As we trailed Capt. Marvel we had time to look at the way the deer had gone into the snow to find grass and to note how the animals had walked through the cedars and spruces without disturbing the heavy white covering of soft snow which the storm had left on them.

Suddenly Marvel stopped and we glanced ahead. About 200 yards up the grade a handsome buck had stepped through the willows and there he stood looking at us. We could see his splendid rack of antlers against the white snow quite clearly. "Can you tie that?" whispered Marvel. "He is way out of range. But if I had a rifle. . . ."

He Keeps His Distance.

When we didn't move the buck stamped his feet with impatience. The seconds went by and still we kept quiet. Then the deer moved forward a few inches, swung his head slightly and again stamped the snow with a front foot. Then he whirled, we heard his snorts, and away he went to safety in the thick cedar swamp on our right.

Earlier in the morning we had a similar experience with four deers. Standing behind Marvel near a run way, four deers broke out of the woods. It was a beautiful picture to see them take the logs and brush piles with effortless grace. All of us strained our eyes to look for a buck as one young doe stopped not more than 40 yards away and casually looked us over. There was nary a buck in the whole lot.

George Lott Again Heads Net Rankings

George M. Lott Jr. once more heads the list of Chicago's best tennis players. He was ranked No. 1 by the Chicago Tennis association at its annual meeting at the Hamilton club yesterday. Helen Fulton, the Chicago girl who won the national girls' championship this year, was given top ranking in that division, while Mrs. Dorothy Weissel Hack, wife of Stanley Hack of the Cubs, headed the list of women singles players.

Ralph Westcott of River Forest was elected president of the association, succeeding Chester C. Johnson. Frank Fulton of Winnetka, father of Helen Fulton, was elected treasurer, succeeding Walter T. Hayes, who has been active as a player and official for 30 years. Leo F. Boldenweck succeeded Charles L. Thayer as secretary, while A. T. Campbell and Jack C. Harris were reelected first and second vice president, respectively.

Stagg Again a Director.

Coach A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago, who has long been active in tennis, was reelected a director of the association, the other directors being J. V. McCauley, Thomas J. McMahon, Walter Gallond, C. S. DeLong, and W. M. Strack. James C. Stewart and C. C. Johnson were elected to the executive committee.

Most of the 42 clubs in the association were represented at the annual meeting, which included reports of activity during the 1932 season. Awards were presented to the winners of the annual interclub matches as follows: Hamilton Park Tennis club, division A; Oak Park Tennis club, B; Fullerton Park Tennis club, C; Tulley Park Tennis club, D, and Park Ridge Tennis club, women's division.

EVERETT RALLIES TO KNOCK OUT BIFF BENNETT

Buck Everett, Gary, Ind., heavyweight, after being knocked down twice, rallied to knock out Biff Bennett, Fort Sheridan, in the second round of the windup of the professional boxing show at the Rainbo Fronton last night. Everett connected with a hard blow which sent Bennett out of the ring, where he was counted out by Referee Oscar Richman.

Buckeyes Face Illini; Records Mean Nothing

to practice on there, so Coach Sam Willaman brought them 34 miles to Champaign for their final drill and it just happened the members of both squads romped out on the field at the same time.

Capt. Gill Berry of the Illini and Capt. Lew Hinchman, the famous Ohio State half back, who are expected to play the hero roles, didn't even glare at each other. However, neither gave any indication that he knew the other was within a thousand miles of him. Both these great Western conference stars will be playing their final college games and they were never in better condition.

Johnson Gets His Chance.

There also has been one change in the regular Ohio State front. Jack Smith has replaced the brilliant Carroll at half back. Carroll isn't in the best of physical condition, but he will see some service.

The charge of the heavy Buckeye line, which will be led by the giant Rosequist and Gallus, was causing whatever worry there was in the Illini camp tonight. The Buckeyes had been expected to accomplish much more than they did this season, the only conference game they were able to win being the one with Northwestern. Illinois has beaten Indiana and Chicago and lost to Wisconsin. A surprise victory over Ohio State will provide a place in the first division for the Illini.

A reduction in admission prices to $1 and $2 has caused a brisk sale of seats and it is expected that 20,000 or more will see the game. Nearly half of these will be Ohio State backers.

There were so many Buckeye rooters in town tonight that Ohio State became a 2 to 5 favorite.

LAYS BOYCOTT BY STUDENTS TO ADULTS' POLITICS

Frank V. Svoboda, president of the Cicero school board, yesterday declared the students' boycott at the J. Sterling Morton High school was fostered by adults for political purposes. He said he believed the recent $200,000 pay roll reduction was responsible for the action of the students. He ordered a complete investigation at the meeting of the school board Dec. 12.

The boycott was urged on Wednesday in hand bills passed out by students early Wednesday. The circulars listed a dozen grievances all alleging politics in the operation of the school. In two days, as a result of the boycott, the revenue of the cafeteria has dropped from $330 a day to less than $75. It was revealed by Joseph Becker, controller of the school board.

The hand bills protested against the discharge of Evelyn Olston, former manager of the cafeteria, and charged that the food now served is poor and that the number of employes has been increased from 20 to 50. President Svoboda admitted that student workers had been replaced by outside help to relieve unemployment, but declared food is now cheaper and better than ever. Edward Stuchlik, druggist and a member of the board, named in the hand bills as profiting by the sale of a foot salve, denied the charge.

Tuley High school students defeated the faculty yesterday afternoon, 21 to 14, in their annual basketball game. Altman of the teachers was high point man with 6 points.

COCKER SPANIEL'S FIELD WORK TO BE SEEN AT SHOW

A special exhibition of retrieving by a trained cocker spaniel will be an added feature of the twenty-second annual dog show which opens this morning in the One Hundred Thirty-first Regiment armory under the auspices of the Western Specialty Clubs' association.

The Cocker Spaniel Club of the Middle West is sponsoring this demonstration to show the working ability of the breed in the field. Live ducks and pheasants will be used in the show ring with Phar-Lap, a black cocker owned and trained by Dr. S. O. Sowle of Rockford, Ill., who will direct the dog in its exhibition.

The show will continue through tomorrow night.

VALPARAISO WINS SEVENTH GAME IN ROW, 18 TO 0

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Valparaiso university defeated Grand Rapids college today, 18 to 0. By winning this final game of the season, Valparaiso finished with a record of seven victories and no defeats, and laid undisputed claim to the Indiana intercollegiate conference championship.

The first touchdown came in the second quarter when Brown took the ball over after a 55 yard march. In the fourth quarter, a pass from Smattak to Rusinski into the end zone scored the second touchdown. Valparaiso then marched eighty yards with Peters scoring on an off tackle smash. The game ended with the ball in Valparaiso's possession on Grand Rapids' five yard line.

COLGATE GETS A BID TO PLAY IN PASADENA GAME

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Colgate university, one of the undefeated teams in the east, has been asked to consider a possible invitation to play in the annual tournament of roses at Pasadena, Cal., on New Year's day. This was made known today by Dr. George B. Cutten, president of Colgate, who arrived in Memphis to deliver an address.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 18.—Lafayette and Tippecanoe county are buried in the snow, all except Ross-Ade Stadium, where tomorrow undefeated Purdue and valiant Indiana will engage in the 35th renewal of their Hoosier feud.

Some thoughtful fellow saw the record snow before it started falling and got out the tarpaulin. As a consequence not a flake has fallen on the playing field. And tonight a big crew of work men cleared the seats.

It's a Tough Stretch Drive.

And since this has started out to be a weather story, there is no better place than here to tell all Purdue and Indiana alumni in Chicago that they'd better switch from their autos to the choo-choo if they're planning to get here just in time for the kickoff. The going is perfect from tropical Chicago to Kentland, but to traverse the 42 miles from Kentland to Lafayette is a harrowing experience designed to scare and delay anybody except Admiral Byrd and his pals.

This, however, is not a hint to stay away from Lafayette. Those who know about such things say that one of the best games of the ancient series is in store for those who attend.

Look For Soggy Field.

Although, as you've already been informed, there has been no snow on the Purdue football acreage, the turf is reported to be a mite soggy, with both teams alleging this will prove a marked advantage to the other fellows.

As all football observers know, a victory for Purdue tomorrow may mean a duplication of their glory of 1929, when they won the Big Ten title all by themselves—this hinging on the contingency that Minnesota upsets Michigan. If Purdue wins and Minnesota ties Michigan, Purdue will cut in for a share of the title, as it did last year.

Beating Indiana Comes First.

All of these ifs and ands are not occupying Purdue partisans as much as you might suppose, however. The old gold and black is concerning itself with the matter over which the Boilermakers personally have control—the task of beating Indiana.

If they win tomorrow the Boilermakers will have gone through the season undefeated, and after all, what more can a group of football bugs ask of their heroes?

The Northwestern tie, looked upon as an accident, in view of the statistics that day and the comparative showings of the two outfits later on, is not a subject for moaning here, though the circumstance will keep Purdue from a share of the conference championship if Michigan wins tomorrow.

Mr. Woodworth Delivers Again.

Every time we come to Lafayette, Robert Woodworth, Purdue's astute statistician, takes a batch of hot statistics out of the oven for our perusal. Since this year's Purdue team is one of the best in the country, we propose to slap some of his best items at you so you can figure out your own dope on what Purdue may be expected to do against Indiana tomorrow:

"Purdue's back field combination, acknowledged to be the best balanced and best blocking foursome in the Big Ten, has lugged the ball well over a mile on running plays from scrimmage alone in its first seven games, while establishing the remarkable average of 4.84 yards per attempt. On 401 attempts the Boilermakers have gained a total of 1,942 yards through some of the toughest forward walls in the conference.

Here Are the Figures.

"Complete ground gaining statistics on Purdue's first backs, up to and including the Iowa game, follow:

	Attempts.	Total yards.	Average gain.
Roy Horstmann, lb	105	455	4.36
Duane Purvis, hb	93	584	6.06
Fred Hecker, hb	84	402	4.78
James Carter, hb	68	324	4.77
Denis Moore, hb	8	24	3.00
Paul Pardonnerm, qb	2	2	1.00

"Possession of the Old Oaken Bucket, symbol of football supremacy between Hoosierdoms' sister Big Ten institutions, along with Purdue's chance at titular honors, will be at stake. The bucket was first established as a perennial trophy in 1925, when the two teams fought to a 0 to 0 tie. Since that time Indiana's lone clear title to the trophy came on its last visit to Lafayette two years ago when the Crimson upset the Boilermakers, 7 to 6.

"Eleven senior members of the Boilermaker squad, including Paul Moss, end; Roy Horstmann, full back, and Capt. John Oehler, center, all of whom have been important factors in piling up the record of the last three years, which shows 21 victories against only three defeats and one tie, will be prepared to give their utmost in their effort to enhance the record and at the same time gain the edge in their personal series with the Crimson. As far as the seniors are concerned, the series is "even stephen" with Indiana, for the Crimson eked out a 7 to 6 victory here in 1930, while Purdue came back with a 19 to 0 victory at Bloomington last year."

Jones, Edmonds, Saiuski, Veller, Sawicki, Lyons, Babb and all the other Indiana stars were to be allowed to sleep in their own beds tonight. The Indiana squad will not leave Bloomington till 8 o'clock tomorrow morning and are scheduled to arrive in Lafayette at 10:45 o'clock.

Englewood, Morgan Park Clash for Title

Opportunity knocks at the doors of Englewood and Morgan Park today. The teams, the former out of championship games since 1926 and Morgan Park facing the first chance to gain a title in its history, will meet for the Chicago Public High School league football championship at White City stadium, 63d street and South Park avenue.

Whether the 1932 shield awarded by the league will be added to the eight which now adorn Englewood's halls will depend on a speedy back field which has fought its way to the central section championship and a victory over Harrison Tech, last year's city champion, in the semi-final round last Saturday.

Last Appearance for Pair.

Two members of the back field, Capt. Pete Rozgus, half-pint quarter back, and George Appel, full back, will be making their last league appearances. Rozgus, rated as one of the outstanding ball carriers in the league, has scored in all of Englewood's five consecutive victories.

Aiding Capt. Rozgus and Appel will be George May and Steve Garbier. One regular lineman will be missing, Clifford Adkins, veteran left tackle, who will remain on the bench because of injuries. His place will be filled by the heaviest man on the Englewood squad—Joe Candela, a 205 pound junior.

Surprising victories, the most startling of which came last Saturday when Morgan Park defeated Schurz in the semi-finals, have made Morgan Park's followers believe it has a good chance to win the championship despite Englewood's powerful offensive and the fact that a south section team has never won the title.

Morgan Park Unbeaten.

Morgan Park also is undefeated in league competition. In its starting back field lineup will be Clyde Pendleton, full back; Walter Kleinman, right half back; Tommy Tompkins, quarter back, and Capt. Dick Bowlin, left half back. Capt. Bowlin's presence in the starting lineup was doubted when he was forced to remain from practice because of an ear infection.

Bowlin, who scored one of the two touchdowns against Schurz last week and considered as Morgan Park's best ball carrier, did not attend school on Wednesday and Thursday. He spent the two days in bed, and according to physicians is ready to play.

York Seeks Title.

Three games will end the 1932 West Suburban league season. York, undefeated leader, will seek the championship against West Chicago at Elmhurst. In the other games Maine will meet Hinsdale at the latter's field, and Downers Grove will play Glenbard at Glen Ellyn.

Mount Carmel and St. Mel, the two finalists for the Chicago Catholic High school league championship, who will meet at White City stadium tomorrow, continued practice yesterday. Short drills this afternoon will end their preparations. The Englewood-Morgan Park lineup:

U. S., ARGENTINA OPEN PLAY FOR POLO CUP TODAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 18.—The United States and Argentina will open their polo series for the "Cup of the Americas" here tomorrow with the same players who won the Argentina open championship in the American lineup.

The probable American starting lineup will be Michael Phipps at No. 1, Winston Guest at No. 2, Elmer Boeseke at No. 3, and Billy Post at back. The cup, which will be a permanent trophy for polo competition between the two countries, was donated by President Justo of Argentina.

Johnny Jadick Stops Lew Raymond in Fifth

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Johnny Jadick, 136¼, of Philadelphia, won a technical knockout over Lew Raymond, 148½, of Baltimore, in the fifth round of their scheduled ten round bout at a boxing show tonight. Jadick cut both Raymond's eyes at the start of the fifth and after the round the club physician refused to permit him to continue.

Gardiner's a Southpaw, Which Makes Him Right Handed

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Chuck Gardiner is only 27 years old, but here he is, the dean of the present Blackhawk roster. Edward Dixon Graham claims the honor of having been longest on the Chicago pay roll, but Chuck refuses to discuss the issue, other than to say that Graham doesn't know what he's talking about.

Usually when any one writes a series of pieces about Blackhawk players he starts off with Mr. Gardiner, but by the practice of great restraint we have held off till this, our fourth installment, to get around to Chuck.

It Really Was Quite a Prob'em.

The reason for this is not any sort of discrimination or a desire to be different. The delay has been caused by our trying to figure out something. We haven't figured it out, and we're tired trying. Here's what has had us worried:

Charles Gardiner is left handed, and that makes him the only right handed goalie in the National league. This seems to be perfectly clear and obvious to all the hockey players we've asked about it, and Chuck himself spent a half hour making phantom stops to prove it. He throws with his left hand, cuts his victuals with his left hand and wrote with his left hand until his teacher made him cut it out. Moreover, he manipulates his hockey stick with his left hand, which is what makes him a right handed goalie, the only one in the National league.

The fellow who gets out press agent sheets for the National league wrote a piece about Chuck being the only left handed goalie in the National league. This brought a lot of protest from Gardiner and other technicians, who told the fellow to be more careful and get things right once in a while.

Holds Goalie Trophy for National League.

Right or left, Gardiner currently holds the George Vezina trophy, and that certainly is something to make a goalie just as happy as goalies ever get. It is the award for the best goal tending record in the National league.

GATEKEEPER

CHUCK GARDINER.

47 games last year, which was much the lowest in the league. The record included five shutouts and 20 games in which the enemy was held to one goal per game.

Mr. Gardiner was born in Edinbourgh, Scotland, and is said to be the only major league hockey player from the other side of the Atlantic, excepting his teammate, Gottselig, of Russia. Though he is a lavish spender, he likes to tell Scotch jokes on himself. When he joined the Hawks he weighed 146 pounds. Maj. McLaughlin, owner of the Hawks, gives a generous grocery allowance on the road. Chuck now weighs 178. [That's not OUR dig; it's one of Chuck's Scotch confessions.]

When Chuck arrived in Winnipeg at the age of eight he already had saved $3.55, he says. Chuck adds there was quite a scandal about how one so young could amass $3.55 in Scotland. Chuck didn't get it in Scotland, but acquired it in pennies for singing on the boat coming over. Incidentally, Chuck now has the finest baritone voice in hockey.

He's Personable, Humorous, Modest.

Despite his Scotch yarns, Gardiner is one of the most personable men one is liable to meet in professional athletics. Belying a more or less "dead pan" on a hockey rink, he is of especial good humor, and offstage his face carries a smile more often than not.

He is a modest fellow, not so common among successful athletes. In support of this modesty appraisal is Gardiner's own story of the radio salesman who called at the Wedgewood hotel to sell a noisemaker to Lola Couture, member of the Blackhawks. In the lobby the salesman struck up a conversation with Chuck, whom he failed to recognize.

The conversation turned to the Hawks' opening game in Detroit, which the Hawks lost, 3 to 1. Here Chuck quotes the glib salesman: "I guess that grandstander, Gardiner, blew that one. The damn fool won't stay in his net but wants to slide around on his belly in the middle of the rink. If I was McLaughlin I'd ship him down the river."

Chuck says he agreed with the salesman with the following parting words: "You certainly have this chump Gardiner pegged. If McLaughlin can't sell him he ought to poison him."

P. S. We almost forgot. Chuck asked us to tell you he is the secretary of the Winnipeg Gun club, that he won last summer's trapshooting tournament with 50 straight, and that he is the handicap champ of Winnipeg.

TEXAS GAINS AT WILL TO DEFEAT ARKANSAS, 34-0

Fayetteville, Ark., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Texas university's dazzling running and passing attack defeated Arkansas university, 34 to 0, in the final conference game for Arkansas today. Although Texas was credited with only 12 first downs as compared with 8 for Arkansas, the Longhorns gained at will and scored three of their five touchdowns from around the 40 yard line.

Baby Ruths' Girls' Court Team Wins Ninth Straight

The Baby Ruth's girls basketball team won its ninth straight game of the season last night when it defeated the Pilgrims girls' team, 21 to 12, on the latter's court. High point scorers for the victors were Frances Lambert with nine and Peggy Self with six.

Friedman to Meet Bears, No Fooling!

Benny Friedman, forward passing captain of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who disappointed Chicago patrons a few weeks ago by failing to appear with his team, will give them their first 1932 view of his prowess tomorrow when the Dodgers battle the Bears at Wrigley field.

The opening kickoff is scheduled for 2 o'clock, instead of 2:15, as has been the case in the past.

While Benny will be the main target of the Bears, there are a number of other former college stars in the Brooklyn lineup who will bear watching. Among them is Johnny Karcis, who will start at full back. Karcis was an important cog in the Carnegie Tech machine which defeated Notre Dame a few years ago.

Karcis will have to be at his best, however, to compete with Bronko Nagurski, former Minnesota battering ram, who is enjoying his most successful season as full back for the Bears.

Lloyd Burdick, the former Illinois tackle, now a Bear mainstay, will have his work cut out for him in opposing Milo Lubratovich, one time Badger, who is using his 230 pounds to good advantage in the Brooklyn line. Burdick weighs 240 and stands 6 feet 5 inches.

One of the newcomers to the league who has made several of the veterans give way is Jack Grossman, graduate from the Rutgers university team. Grossman, who plays left half back, is the receiver for most of Friedman's devastating forward passes and is up with the leaders in ground gained and points scored.

The return to the Bear lineup of Red Grange, Jules Carlson and Joe Kopcha, who have been on the injured list, brings the team to full strength for the first time in weeks.

Two strong semi-pro elevens, the Austin Bears and the Monarchs, will meet at 12:15 o'clock in a curtain raiser to the league game.

Open All-Star Three Cushion Tourney Today

An all-star three cushion billiard tournament will open at the Bensinger Randolph room this afternoon. Two of the Chicago players who will take part in the coming world's championship match when Augie Kieckhefer will be called on to defend his title for 1933, will compete.

Allen Hall, runnerup for the northern sectional title, and Arthur Thurnblad, 1931 world's title holder, who lost the crown to Kieckhefer last year, will be seen in action against such other stars as Earl Lookabaugh of the Illinois Athletic club, Charles [Cowboy] Weston, Len Kenney, and Ray Palmer of Milwaukee.

The schedule calls for two games each afternoon and evening, starting at 1:30 and 7:30 p. m.

Today's schedule:
1:30 p. m., Thurnblad vs. Weston; 3 p. m., Kenney vs. Palmer; 7:30 p. m., Hall vs. Weston, and 9 p. m., Lookabaugh vs. Kenney.

Fenger Eleven to Play Pullman Tech Thursday

Fenger High school's football team will meet Pullman Tech in the eleventh game of their series Thanksgiving day, at Pullman field. Fenger scored its victory in the series last year, winning, 7 to 6.

OKLAHOMA AGGS BEAT GRINNELL 27-0; WIN TITLE

Stillwater, Okla., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Oklahoma A. & M. college defeated Grinnell, 27 to 0, before a crowd of 4,000 tonight to win the 1932 Missouri valley conference championship.

A reserve back field clinched the victory in the first quarter, giving the regulars a 13 to 0 lead. Grinnell, however, rallied at times with a pass attack and excellent punting by Ulrich and Clarke.

MAROON HOCKEY TEAM RELEASES BILL PHILLIPS

MONTREAL, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Bill Phillips, veteran utility player of the Montreal Maroons of the National Hockey league was given his unconditional release today at his own request. Phillips was the last surviving member of the 1926 Maroon team which won the National league championship and the Stanley cup.

Several clubs had made offers for Phillips, the Marons said, but he was made a free agent in recognition of his seven years' service. He is expected to make a deal with some other major league club.

DE PAUL BATTLES NORTH DAKOTA AT LOYOLA TODAY

De Paul university's undefeated football team will be the underdog in its game today with the University of North Dakota at Loyola stadium.

It will be De Paul's homecoming game and will mark the farewell appearance of seven De Paul veterans.

De Paul has played two ties and won five times in seven games. North Dakota, however, boasts two of the fastest backs in the country in Larry Knauf and Ralph Pierce. Coach Jack West also rates his squad the strongest defensive team in his career.

The Dakotans have lost only three games in as many years, two of them to the Army. Their line is built around a tackle—Meinhover, who weighs 260 pounds and stands six feet seven inches in height.

Steffen heads the list of the departing seven. The others are Ted Jablonski, full back; Cherne and Marv Walters, tackles; Eddie Lyons and Dick Finn, ends, and Ernie Butcher, half back. Probable lineup:

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 18.—The bond market gave a spotty, uncertain performance today, with trading volume remaining at a subnormal level. While gains were in the majority, they were limited for the most part to small fractions.

Demand for United States government securities persisted, but gains in that group generally were confined to only a few thirty-seconds of a point. Nevertheless the firm tone reflected a continuation of those influences which have forced prices steadily higher during most of the week.

High Grade Issues Up.

High grade rails, public utilities and industrials either held their ground or made slight advances. American Telephone 5½s on a few transactions went to the year's high record, and higher prices were paid for Union Pacific first 5s, Southwestern Bell Telephone 5s, Bell of Pennsylvania 5s, Burlington 3½s, Illinois Steel 4½s, Delaware and Hudson 5½s, New York Steam 6s, New York Gas 5s, and Public Service Electric and Gas 4s.

Second grade and speculative rails moved but little. Baltimore and Ohio 4½s of 1933 appear to have settled down in a quiet trading position, from which they are not likely to be removed unless subjected to influences which would have a common effect upon all Baltimore and Ohio bonds. The price of around 67, at which many sales were made today, is equivalent to 34 on the new bonds that will be issued in settlement of half the amount of the March 1 maturity. The plan provides for the payment of 50 per cent in cash.

Some Sell Lower.

Although low priced rails in general were steady, there were a few instances of sharp declines on a few sales, including Milwaukee 3½s, Chicago and North Western debenture 5s, Terre Haute refunding 5s, Central of Georgia 5½s, and New Haven 4½s. Industrials were higher for the most part, with special emphasis on Pressed Steel Car 5s, Pure Oil 5½s, Remington-Rand 5½s, Shell Pipe Line 5s, Lackawanna Steel 5s, and Dodge 6s.

German 5½s and 7s were comparatively steady and most other German issues were slightly higher. Argentines were firm and most other foreign issues were fractionally higher.

Mathieson Alkali.

Kindly let me know about Mathieson Alkali stock for investment.—J. N.

Mathieson Alkali Works, Inc., is principally a manufacturer of caustic soda and soda ash. It also produces liquid chlorine, bicarbonate of soda, dry ice, and synthetic ammonia. Raw materials used are salt and limestone. The company's salt deposits are estimated to be sufficient for 200 years' operation and limestone deposits are estimated to provide for 100 years' supply.

Soda ash is sold mainly to glass, soap, and chemical manufacturers. Caustic soda is sold to petroleum refiners and manufacturers of rayon, soap, and chemicals. Liquid chlorine is sold mainly to paper and textile companies.

Net income of $126,000, or 13 cents per common share, in the third quarter of 1932 brought net for the first nine months to $549,000, or 65 cents per common share, against net of $1,063,000, or $1.45 per common share, for the corresponding 1931 period. On Oct. 29 a press dispatch stated that operations in October were better than in the preceding month, due to the increased operations of textile and rayon industries. Full year earnings were estimated at $728,000, or about 85 cents a common share.

Net for 1931 was $1,324,000, or $1.88 per common share, against net of $2,096,000, or $2.96 per common share, for 1930. Net for 1929 was $2,324,000 against $2,091,000 for 1928. In 1931 price cutting seriously affected earnings. Prices in 1932, although only slightly above 1931 levels, were steady. The custom of the trade is to contract in advance for one year's supplies. Profits of the company depend on activity of its customers and the price level.

On Dec. 31, 1931, current assets were $2,706,000 and current liabilities were $759,000. Cash alone was $607,000. Working capital was $1,946,000, against $2,196,000 the year before.

There is no funded debt. Capitalization consists of 24,610 shares of 7 per cent cumulative preferred [par $100] and 650,436 shares of no par common. In 1921 the company completed a ten year program of rehabilitation. During the period plant account was increased about $7,000,000 and investments about $1,400,000.

With the payment of July 1, 1932, the common was placed on an annual $2.50 basis. It had previously paid 50 cents a quarter.

The preferred is rather high grade. The common is medium grade.

LAMONT URGES 'VITAL CHANGES' IN BANK LAWS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 18.—Thomas W. Lamont, partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., told the Academy of Political Science at its annual dinner tonight that two vital changes were needed as primary steps for banking reform in the United States—to bring all commercial banks, large or small, under the federal reserve system and to establish "sensible" provisions for regional branch banking. If such reforms were brought about gradually, he asserted, they should result in "some measure of banking stability."

THOMAS W. LAMONT.

Pointing to the fact that 60 per cent of the country's banks, with resources of more than twelve billion dollars, were outside the federal reserve system, the banker declared that no banking system can function adequately with only a limited number of banks within it. He asserted that despite the great number of bank failures in recent years the country still has too many banks, and that "thousands of banks lack proper safeguards." Banking units should be larger than they are, he went on, and small, ill capitalized institutions should be merged to gain the advantages of larger banks.

Cites Nonreserve Failures.

Mr. Lamont emphasized that nearly four and one-half times as many nonmember banks have failed as members of the federal reserve. Most of these failures, he went on, were small country banks, under no control from the federal reserve, and with such small paid-in capital as to be "subject to impairment under the most ordinary conditions of difficult times." Ninety per cent of the banks that failed between 1921 and 1930, he said, were in rural communities, "subject to the vicissitudes of crop failures or of the expansion and deflation of business booms, without any of the protection afforded by a parent institution fortified with ample capital and managed by experienced men."

Almost all of the failures of small suburban banks around Chicago this year, Mr. Lamont asserted, could have been avoided if the Illinois laws had permitted branch banking. He said that the lessons must be obvious of a situation in which it was impossible under the law for the large Chicago banks to serve the suburbs through branch banks.

Mismanagement in Cities Rare.

Mr. Lamont said that mismanagement of large city banks, although there had been striking instances of it, was rare compared to mismanagement of country banks. It was the weaknesses in the rural banks that led to hoarding on a grand scale last year, he declared. He went on to say that the need last year was not for currency, but for credit aid; but that sound credit risks were not available for the banks because of the deflation in security and commodity prices. There had never been a time, he said, when the facilities of the federal reserve system had not been more than ample to meet all legitimate credit needs.

Laxity in granting charters to banks and in supervising their conduct, Mr. Lamont continued, was a result of the confusion due to the varying federal and state banking laws, giving forty-nine different sets of banking laws.

Gold Standard Never Perilled.

Mr. Lamont asserted that the federal reserve system had brought "immeasurable benefits" to American industry and commerce, and that our plight would have been much worse without it. The system's open market policy during the last six months, he said, had proved a great help in stopping the deflation of credit and prices. He gave it credit for maintaining the gold standard on a sound basis in this country. Without mentioning President Hoover's statement to the contrary during the recent election campaign, he added that "we have never been near to the point of abandoning the gold standard."

"Nothing can or will drive us from that standard," he concluded. "A Democratic administration, just like the steadfast Republican one before it, will continue to uphold the complete integrity of it. Make no mistake: in a dark and troublous world America and the American dollar are, as to material factors, the safest things in all the world to tie to."

CLEARING HOUSE TO ACT ON RATE CUT ON MONDAY

The meeting of the Chicago Clearing House association which had been tentatively scheduled for next week yesterday was definitely set for Monday, Nov. 21. The meeting has been called so that the association may decide upon a change in the interest rate on savings deposits in Chicago banks. A new rate of 2½ per cent has already been agreed upon by the banks individually, it is reported.

Illinois Mines Rehire Nearly 10,000 in October

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Coal production increased one million tons and almost 10,000 miners returned to work in Illinois during October, John G. Millhouse, director of the state department of mines and minerals, said today. The number of mines working increased from 76 to 124, he said.

I.C.C. Blocks Rails' Bid to Regain Freight

BY SCRUTATOR.

How many uneconomic practices are forced on the railroads by the hampering regulations of the interstate commerce commission? Recently it was pointed out in this column that the railroads were losing traffic and revenues to competing means of transportation through failure to make freight rates that will encourage shipments larger than carloads.

Since that article was written several developments have shown that the carriers are studying ways to break away from practices and restrictions made obsolete by industrial and commercial progress. One western road, the Chicago and Alton, has minimized motor truck competition by carrying loaded trucks between Chicago and East St. Louis at rates that are lower than the cost of operating trucks on highways.

Freight Forwarding Expands.

Our attention has been called to the recent rapid expansion of the freight forwarding business by several companies. Circulars of these agencies show that they operate between the principal cities with daily or frequent shipments and even accept export shipments. For a number of cities the service includes either free store-door delivery or pickup. Yet the freight rates quoted by these agencies are generally lower than those charged by the railroads.

These freight forwarding agencies solicit less than carload freight, which are consolidated into carloads. Thus, they pay the lower carload rate charged by the railroads. The difference between carload and less than carload rates is sufficient to pay the expense of handling the freight, loading the cars, charging less to shippers and still affording the agencies a profit.

Dodging I. C. C. Rules.

Under the system of railroad freight tariffs governed by the interstate commerce commission, it seems apparent that the hauling of motor trucks by the railroads and the freight forwarding business are in the nature of subterfuges. The railroads have an elaborate system of commodity rates, both for carload and less than carload freight, which they must charge under schedules approved by the commission. But they may haul motor trucks containing all manner of goods at a flat rate.

Both the motor truck operators and the freight forwarding agencies charge what the traffic will bear, although both are subject to competitive costs imposed by the railroads. It would seem, however, that the railroads themselves should be able to render as efficient and cheap servic as the freight forwarders if they want and were permitted to do so. There appears to be no good reason why they cannot consolidate less than carload freight as well as the forwarders.

Comment of Shippers.

Several bits of comment on our earlier article concerning the failure of the railroads to encourage large volume traffic by low rates emphasize the point.

"Loss of lumber tonnage to the western railroads is the greatest single item," a lumberman writes. "From three to five thousand carloads a month go through the Panama canal. The boats have dropped their rates and so have got the business, which has meant an enormous loss to the railroads running into Chicago in the last six or seven years. The railroads could recover this business with lower rates. They cannot overlook the new low cost of transportation by boat and highway."

MIDDLE WEST CO. TO SEEK PAYMENT OF $750,000 LOAN

Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley yesterday authorized the receivers for the Middle West Utilities company to negotiate with Earle H. Reynolds, former president of the Peoples Trust and Savings bank, for settlement of a $750,000 debt owed by Reynolds to Middle West.

According to the receivers, Samuel Insull, then chairman of the board of Middle West, gave Reynolds $750,000 of Middle West funds in July, 1931, in exchange for 2,500 shares of Peoples bank stock, then valued at $300 a share. While the transaction appeared on the books as a purchase, Reynolds had since admitted that it was a loan, according to the receivers.

The bank stock, the receivers assert, is now worthless, the bank having liquidated voluntarily many months ago. In making the loan the receivers disclose Insull used one of his numerous subsidiary companies, the Public Service Trust, as a clearing house, Reynolds receiving a $750,000 cashier's check drawn on the trust which, in turn, was reimbursed by Middle West. Under Judge Lindley's order the trust is relieved of any claim or obligation in the matter.

REPORT PREDICTS EARLY AID FOR LAND BANK BONDS

Brokers Compare Liens and Assets.

Pointing out that there exists an average deficiency of nearly 50 per cent in the assets behind the various joint stock land bank bond issues, R. J. Friss & Co., in a bulletin distributed yesterday, predict that early steps will be taken to extend relief to the investors who bought "joints" because they were sponsored by the federal government.

"We are sanguine that congress will act soon in the situation," this house informs its customers. "The steps to be taken are simple. Primarily, a complete examination should be required of all the loans of joint stock land banks, particularly those delinquent.

Here's the Plan.

"When it appears that a farmer borrower is responsible and is willing to work out his indebtedness he should be granted an extension on current installments for a discretionary period. Whereupon, payments in offset must be advanced to the joint stock land banks, presumptively by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, since it is evident that the banks would not otherwise have the wherewithal to meet bond interest necessities.

"No more receiverships should be permitted in the farm loan system, and those now existing should be promptly closed and the banks reestablished."

This concern has prepared an analysis of the joint stock land banks as of Sept. 30, 1932, which discloses that only about 52 per cent of the farm loan bonds outstanding are secured by earning assets.

Comparison of Liens.

The analysis shows that the banks had aggregate real estate holdings of $44,674,000 and sheriffs' certificates, judgments, etc., of $21,131,000, a total of $65,805,000.

In addition, based on estimates and reports, there was $233,165,000 principal amount of mortgage loans in default and subject to foreclosure.

These items, amounting in the aggregat to $298,971,000, are the outgrowth of loans made to farmer borrowers and produce no specific income at present.

Farm loan bonds outstanding against the joint stock land banks, the report shows, total $515,870,000, against which are held approximately $266,026,000 of earning assets, consisting mostly of mortgage loans not delinquent.

TRUMBULL KEEPS UP AIR FIRM ROW DESPITE PEACE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 18.—The compromise announced Thursday night by E. L. Cord and the management of the Aviation corporation, who had been struggling for control of the company for more than a week, was followed today by an almost complete cessation of hostilities.

The solicitation of stockholders' proxies for the special meeting to be held Dec. 21 which has already resulted in the gathering of thousands of shareholders' votes by both factions was stopped, although the proxies continued to be mailed in large numbers.

John H. Trumbull, former governor of Connecticut, who headed a "nonpartisan" proxy committee announced, however, that his group "would continue to function."

Ex-Rail Head Talks of Jobs, Roads and Life

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Sir Henry Thornton, who resigned a few months ago from the presidency of the Canadian National railways dropped into Chicago from Akron, O., yesterday to spend a few days on personal business. Sir Henry, interviewed at the Drake hotel where he is stopping, philosophized a bit and told some of his opinions about railroads.

SIR HENRY THORNTON.

"I started in the railroad business thirty-eight years ago with the Pennsylvania," said Sir Henry, who was born in Logansport, Ind., but whose career took him to England and Canada.

"But my first job was as a football coach," he continued, "and sometimes I wish I had gone on being a football coach."

The former Canadian rail chief looks as if he'd make a mighty good tackle now. He stands better than 6 feet, has a ruddy complexion, and appears to be in the best of condition.

What He Thinks of Jobs.

Sir Henry had something to say about jobs.

"I'd be happy no matter where I was so long as I liked my work," he said. "If my job took me to the middle of the Sahara desert I'd get along. The young man who picks his job because it is in a pleasant locality isn't very likely to have a good position."

Sir Henry exploded reports that he is planning to reënter the railroad business in the country of his birth.

"There is nothing to it," he said. "I am going to live in New York through this winter at least. I have no particular plans at the moment. It seems mighty good for the first time in ten years not to have a care on my mind."

Won't Talk of Quarrel.

He declined to discuss his controversy with the Canadian cabinet which culminated in his resignation from the Canadian National, saying that the incident was closed.

Discussing the general plight of railroads, Sir Henry said they should be given a free rein to meet the competition that now confronts them. Illustrating his point, he said that some years ago locomotives weren't improved very materially from year to year, but with the advent of real competition from electricity and gasoline motors their designers produced an engine that is as efficient as any of its rivals.

"Give the operators of the railroads a free hand to improve their service and they will keep up with their competitors," he said.

Speaking of government control, he explained that 25 years ago the roads enjoyed a virtual monopoly and consequently some sort of control was desirable in the public interest. Now, the railroads have competition from highway transportation, waterways and airplanes, he said, and consequently the monopoly is broken.

Highway Transportation to Stay.

Sir Henry said highway transportation is here to stay and he does not favor restriction of its use. However, he suggested the following points to put this form on a fair basis with the railroads:

"Let him who uses the highways for commercial purposes pay a charge somewhere commensurate with the uses he makes of them.

"Vehicles should be limited with respect to size so as not to damage the highways or endanger the lives of private users of the highways.

"Those who operate trucks and buses on the highways should be subject to the same physical requirements as railroad employes—their vision and hearing should be tested, etc.

"Finally, rates charged for truck and bus transportation should be subject to federal and state regulation if railroad rates are."

Touching on speed to meet competition from other sources, Sir Henry said that this is a question of money.

"Speed costs real money," he asserted. "In operating railroads the management must determine whether the results will be profitable for installing faster trains. There are no technical difficulties in the way of 150 mile an hour trains, but there is the great matter of heavy cost."

CIGARET PRODUCTION FOR OCTOBER REVEALS 10.3 PER CENT DECLINE

New York, Nov. 18.—Production of cigarets in October totaled 8,351,364,803, a decrease of 10.3 per cent from the total of 9,310,987,817 in September and 6.7 per cent below the 8,956,374,523 reported for October, 1931, according to figures released today by the internal revenue bureau. This was the second consecutive drop since the down trend was broken by the small August increase.

The actual reduction was in line with earlier estimates which indicate a decrease for October of between 6 and 7 per cent from the same month last year. For the first ten months of 1932 production amounted to 88,653,825,126, against 93,303,746,755 in the corresponding interval last year.

HOW LOANS CAN EXPAND CREDIT AND HELP TRADE

Cash Has Increased, Deposits Decreased.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

"Seven times lent, seven times repaid," says one Chicago bank in an advertisement endeavoring to explain how the constant flow of money between banks and industry concentrates credit when and where it is needed.

The thousand dollars that the farmer borrows to purchase feeder cattle and repays after the cattle have been fattened and sold is likely to be the same thousand that the packer borrows from he bank to finance his purchase of the cattle. When the packer has made beef out of the cattle he repays his loan and the same thousand is available for the retailer who sells the meat.

People are beginning to discover that restriction of credit is not due to the amount of money in circulation but rather is due to the lack of fluidity of money.

A Concrete Illustration.

If five men are seated around a table, each owing ten dollars to the man on his right, and one hands his creditor ten dollars, the same bill will settle $50 of debts, if each debtor, in turn, passes it on. But if the first one to receive payments puts the money into his pocket, the $10 bill will pay only the one debt.

"So far as actual money in circulation is concerned," says the Alexander Hamilton institute in its current weekly bulletin, "there has been an increase of 20 per cent since 1929.

"But money is used in settlement of only a small part of business transactions. Bank deposit currency

Pay Rolls Gain in Last Month, U. S. Reports

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Continued substantial improvement in industrial employment conditions and pay roll totals during October was reported today by the bureau of labor statistics.

Combined data from seventeen major industrial groups, the bureau stated, showed that employment in industry as a whole gained 1.1 per cent during the month, while pay roll totals increased by 3.8 per cent from their September level.

In the manufacturing industries, largest and most important of the seventeen groups, the report showed an October gain of 2.4 per cent in employment and 4.7 per cent in workers' earnings.

In 69 Out of 89.

Increased employment was reported in sixty-nine of the eighty-nine manufacturing industries included in the bureau's survey while improved pay roll totals were shown in sixty-eight, the report stated.

The largest employment gain in any individual manufacturing industry, according to the report, was a seasonal increase of more than 100 per cent in the beet sugar industry. Other large increases during the month were noted in the radio industry, where employment gained 17.2 per cent, and in the carpet and rug industry, which showed an employment gain of 14.7 per cent in October.

Good Coal Mine Report.

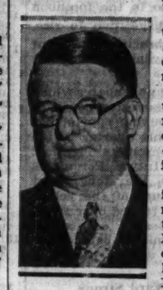
Coal mining showed the largest employment and pay roll gains of any of the seventeen major industrial groups considered by the labor bureau. Employment in anthracite coal mining increased 14.4 per cent in October, while pay rolls gained 42 per cent; in the bituminous coal mining group, according to the report, employment gained 7.4 per cent and pay rolls 25.1 per cent. Employment in the retail trade group was 4.5 per cent above the level of the previous month, while workers' earnings in this group showed a gain of 3.9 per cent. The wholesale trade group reported increases in October of .9 per cent in employment and 1.2 per cent in pay roll totals, acording to the report.

NO. AMERICAN POWER PLANS TO CUT CAPITAL

Write Down Common Stock $34,500,000.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The North American Light and Power company last night announced plans for important changes in its financial structure, including a substantial write-down in its common stock capitalization and the setting up of reserves to take car of the depreciation in values in recent years.



CLEMENT STUDEBAKER JR.

Letters outlining the plan were mailed last night to stockholders. Notice was given of a special stockholders' meeting Dec. 20, at which time the program will be voted on.

The plans call for a reduction in the stated value of the common stock from $23.59 to $5 a share and the setting up of a special property reserve of $22,819,746 and an investment reserve of $3,750,636. The 1,636,555 shares of common stock now outstanding will have a total book value of $8,182,775, as compared with $42,773,975 at the end of last year. The write-down in the common stock amounts to approximately $34,500,000.

In addition the company plans to retire 8,320 shares of preferred stock and 108,339 shares of common stock

TWENTY YEARS of GROWTH

This chart showing the increase in "L-M-C" assets dramatizes the rapid yet consistent growth of the Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Company. In the twenty year period assets have increased from $28,939 in 1912 to over $15,000,000.

TWENTY years ago today the Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Company was chartered as a corporation under the laws of the State of Illinois. When operations were started there were twenty-nine original policyholders and assets were $28,939. The Company now has upwards of 200,000 policyholders and assets are over $15,000,000.

Back of this remarkable growth lies an asset not found on our balance sheet—the confidence of our friends and policyholders in those principles on which the Company was founded. We pledge ourselves to faithfully adhere to those policies—prompt claim service, a consistent effort to reduce losses among policyholders, and conservatism in company operation, underwriting and investment—which have made possible the soundest of protection at a substantial saving in cost.

The Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Company views the past with pride and, at the same time, faces the future with confidence, believing that, in ever increasing numbers, big business and little business—the largest employer or fleet owner—the small property owner or individual motorist—will save with safety on their automobile, compensation and other casualty insurance through the "L-M-C".

GOLD SHARES RISE SHARPLY; OTHERS WAVER

Price Changes Are Small in Dull Market.

BY FRED HARVEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 18.—Gold mining shares advanced in today's dealings on the New York Stock exchange, but elsewhere the market was the same humdrum affair it has been for the last week or more. Turnover fell considerably short of three-quarters of a million shares and it was a rare common share that was able to get more than a point away from its previous closing figure. Final prices were mixed with changes in both directions slight.

For an hour or so in the forenoon the list showed a disposition to rise, some of the leaders bracing up a point or so, but the improvement didn't last long.

The activity in the gold shares which developed late in the afternoon was one of a series of buying spurts that have developed in this quarter in the last ten days. Homestake Mining, Alaska Juneau, McIntyre Porcupine, and Noranda Mines, the four most prominent listed issues of the yellow metal division, were turned over somewhat briskly for a spell and all of them but Noranda finished behind plus signs. Homestake added nearly 2 more points.

Montgomery Ward Strong.

An individual center of activity was Montgomery Ward, which ran up nearly a point. Like the rest of the would-be pacemakers in the earlier dealings, however, the mail order favorite was unable to maintain its show of strength and finished unchanged from its previous close. Several large blocks of the stock changed hands during the first half of the session, one of 9,000 shares being recorded at approximately the peak price of the day. A report that the company was able to operate "in the black" last month for the first time in many months was the secret of buying here.

About the best piece of trade news to come the market's way today was the announcement that the directors of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical company had voted to buy back from stockholders 40 per cent of their preferred holdings at $75 a share. The item was followed by a runup in the price of all the concern's shares, the 7 per cent preferreds jumping 4½ per cent, the 6 per cent more than a point, and the low priced common a fraction.

Aviation Corpoation Off.

Word that the warring aviation factions had kissed and made up, but was without special influence as a market factor. Aviation's price sagged nearly a point.

Tobacco shares, under the shadow of a decline in cigaret output, sagged early and then continued their contrary attitude by perking up moderately when surrounding groups began to react.

Copper and oil shares kept in the background, the first named apparently marking time against the conference of producers to be held here the latter part of this month.

International Harvester refused to be disturbed either by wheat or by the declaration of its regular dividend yesterday.

Several preferred issues took wide swings in a thin market. Endicott dropped 4 points and Florsheim rose 5. Associated Dry Goods slumped 6 points and Safeway Stores gave up half as much.

PRICE OF WHEAT DROPS; CLOSE TO ALL TIME LOW

Decline Is Made Despite Bullish News.

WHEAT PRICES IN GOLD

Wheat prices on a gold basis in leading markets, computed from rates of exchange at the time they closed, follow:

	Thursday.	Wednesday.
Chicago, Dec.	.42¼	.43¼
Winnipeg, Dec.	.39⅝	.39⅝
Liverpool, December.	.50⅝	.50⅝
Liverpool, No. 3 Manitoba.	.54⅛	.54⅛
Buenos Aires, Feb.	.40⅝	.40⅛
Rotterdam, Nov.	.46¼	.46⅞

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

December wheat dropped ⅞c to 42¼c on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday and came within ¾c of the all time record low for any future on the local exchange. Liquidation was on from start to finish and, while there was a fair rally early, the close was at the bottom, with the market showing a heavy undertone. Strong cables from Liverpool were ignored, as the persistent selling of the nearby futures as well as the May by commission houses, was too heavy to be readily absorbed.

Wheat closed at the bottom, with net losses of ⅝@⅞c. December closed at 42⅛@42¼c, equaling the lowest finish so far this season, and went to a discount of 5⅝c under the May, compared with 5¼c the previous day. July closed at 48⅝c.

There was nothing in the character of the news to account for the selling movement in wheat futures, but considerable liquidation was regarded as still hanging over the market, as many longs desire to get out of their holdings before the cash grain is delivered to them. Taken as a whole, overnight developments and the news during the day were rather favorable for the bulls, but had no effect on sentiment, which was distinctly bearish.

News Favors Wheat Bulls.

Cash interests bought December and sold May wheat, but there was considerable outright selling of both deliveries by commission houses. The break was checked by buying against bids. Liverpool old style futures finished unchanged despite the sharp break in American markets on Thursday, and the December there was 50⅝c, or 7⅝c over Chicago at the time it closed, compared with 6c on Thursday. New style futures were unchanged to ⅝c lower, with May at 50⅜c, or 2⅝c over Chicago at the time. The latter difference was not sufficient to cover the import duty on American hard winter, which is around 4c per bu.

Dry weather for the winter wheat crop of 1933 is commencing to attract international attention and is causing considerable bullish comment in some sections. However, it is believed that the market will continue to ignore favorable news until the liquidating movement has run its course.

In addition to the new wheat crop securing a poor start in parts of Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Texas, and Colorado, large areas in Russia, the Balkan countries, and India are also in urgent need of rain and in some quarters the belief prevails that the new crops are making a poorer start than last year.

Liquidation in Corn.

Scattered liquidation was in evidence in December corn and the price dropped ⅝c to 24¼@24⅜c, coming within ⅛c of the inside figure of the season. The close was at the bottom, with net losses of ¼@⅝c, the nearby delivery being 24⅜c, while May was 29⅝@29¾c and July, 31⅝c.

According to reports from the seaboard American corn was about in line for export as the result of the decline in prices in Chicago. The foreign demand was limited. However, interests there expressed the belief that any further break would result in a substantial business. Bids on new No. 4 yellow corn sent out last night to central Iowa figured out slightly less than 9c per bu net to the farmer. The latter shows no disposition to sell his new grain and only 20,000 bu were reported as bought by local handlers yesterday.

Oats, rye, and barley joined in the downward movement in sympathy with wheat and corn. Cash interests and industries were buyers of oats on the break, with the close at net losses of ¾@⅞c, the December being 16c and May, 18⅛c. Rye was off ½@⅝c, with December, 28⅛c, and May, 31⅝c, while barley declined ¾@1⅛c for the day. December was 29½c and May 32½c at the close.
